South Declared Doing Its Part For War Effort

Growth of Industry, Raw Material Production Called Big Factors.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The National Industrial Conference Board today termed the present industrial growth of the south as by far the most important in its economic history.

The board, a private research organization, sketched this picture of the south's contribution to the war effort:

Most of its war activity is concerned with the production of essential raw materials, to a lesser degree with the manufacture of finished armament.

About $400,000,000 of federal money has been allotted for construction of plants for making chemicals, explosives, ammunition and ordnance.

About $44,000,000 has been allotted for expansion of shipyards and about $4,000,000 for aircraft (and parts) plant construction.

Southern states are well supplied with such essentials as iron ore, bauxite, pyrites and some manganese. Found in abundance are crude petroleum, natural gas, sulphur and phosphate rock. One of the south's most valuable assets is the extensive forests of yellow pine.

The iron and steel industry is expanding rapidly in the Birmingham area. Ferro-alloys are being produced in increasing quantities at Muscle Shoals. Cheap power and low transportation costs are attracting the aluminum industry.

Rayon production has grown rapidly in recent years. Production of paper and allied products has about tripled since 1935.

Other products include fertilizers, alcohol, ammonia, synthetic rubber, tetraethyl lead, metallic sodium and alkalis.

The board said some industrial retrenchment in the south is inevitable after the war. Much of the south's industrial development, however, would be adaptable to peacetime uses.

Unorthodox Farmer Makes His Dirt Pay

By JOHN CHADWICK.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

The story of Rory A. Collins is a love story.

From the moment you meet him it's "Sally and I." Sally, of course, is his wife. She is his first and greatest love.

Then there's his love for the soil, for anything that grows.

Add to these two loves the ingredients of will and courage, and you get the story of a sturdy, slightly freckled man who pitched a tent on some cut-over land in the Hood river valley in Oregon in 1908 and developed one of the finest orchards in the northwest.

"I threw away all the books and did it my own way," says this unorthodox farmer who considers the beauty of his surroundings part of his pay.

Collins told his story in an interview yesterday. He and his "Sally" came here for the Ameri-

The new board has 12 members, four each representing the public, industry and employees.

It was set up to adjust labor disputes and avoid strikes and lockouts so that there might be no interruption of a vast flow of war machines and equipment from America's industrial plants.

The executive order said that "the national interest demands that there shall be no interruption of any work which contributes to the effective prosecution of the war."

Direct Negotiation.
This procedure for settling disputes threatening to interrupt war work was provided:

1. The parties to issue shall resort first to "direct negotiations or to the procedures provided in a collective bargaining agreement."

2. Failing to achieve settlement through such a negotiation, the Labor Department's conciliation commissioners must be notified, if they have not intervened already.

3. Should conciliation fail, the secretary of labor must certify the dispute to the War Labor Board. However, the board, in its discretion, after consultation with the secretary, may take jurisdiction over the dispute on its own motion.

Thereafter, the board may use mediation, voluntary arbitration or arbitration under rules established by it, to effect a settlement.

Other Members Listed.
In addition to Davis, these other public members were named: Vice Chairman George W. Taylor, professor of economics at the University of Pennsylvania and impartial chairman for various industries; Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; and Wayne L. Morse, dean of the University of Oregon's law school.

Employer representatives are: Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America; George Meany, secretary-treasurer, American Federation of Labor; R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers of America; Matthew Woll, vice president of the A. F. of L.

Four alternate members for workers, who will serve in the absence of regular employee representatives, were appointed as follows:

Martin P. Durkin, secretary-treasurer, United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters of the United States and Canada; C. S.

U.S. Pressure Put on Ireland For Air Bases

Use of Points To Guard Convoy Lanes Is Aim of New Effort.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
LONDON, Jan. 12.—The United States was said tonight to be taking the lead in an increasingly determined effort—informal but none the less official—to obtain from neutral Eire the use of vital bases for guarding the Atlantic convoy lanes.

A British informant who said the brunt of future negotiations would fall largely upon the United States suggested that the Irish and their New York-born prime minister might heed America's arguments more readily than those of England.

Prime Minister Eamon de Valera stood firm, however, in his insistence that Eire would invite attack if she permitted any part of her territory to be used by a belligerent power.

Speaking in Dublin today he denied that there had been any secret bargaining between Eire and any other nation and declared:

"We will defend ourselves from attacks from any quarter. We did and are doing our best to get arms. What arms we can get we will get, it being understood that they are to be used to defend our territory against any aggressor, no matter who it might be."

100 Here Seek Driving Jobs on Burma Lifeline

Atlanta Cabmen Signify Their Intention To Enter Service.

Atlanta taxi drivers may soon be skimming around the hairpin turns of the Burma road, burning up that famous highway to keep supplies rolling into China, it was disclosed here yesterday.

E. L. Abercrombie, business agent of Teamsters' Local No. 450, most of whose members are expert chauffeurs employed by the Yellow Cab Company, said at least 100 of the 1,000 members of the local have signified their intention to sign up for the duration of the war.

The opportunity to step on the gas along the Burma road is outlined in the current issue of the union's national publication, and Abercrombie said members of his local had become interested "right off the bat."

"The men who told me they were ready to sign up for this work said they wanted to be of service," said Abercrombie. "Besides, many of them are too old for active military service and they want to see some action. So this Burma road job looks mighty good to them."

"If our men get a chance to go, they'll get through those supplies to China all right. They're all mad at Japan anyway. If they can't go to Japan through the front door, with United States troops, they're all set to take the goods to China through the back door."

Abercrombie added the pay for truckers on the Burma road is $1.75 an hour straight time, with drivers permitted to work as long as they can perform their tasks.

He also said officials who have charge of recruiting for the Burma road service had been notified about the desires of the 100 men here to join up.

Admiral Thomas C. Hart In Dutch East Indies

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(P)—The Navy said today Admiral Thomas C. Hart, Allied naval commander-in-chief, and commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, is in the Dutch East Indies, where the Japanese have spread their invasion.

The Navy would give no details of the admiral's trip or say how he traveled, but it did say that he had been in the region for a week.

Bird-Lover Outwitted By Clever Squirrel

Impudent Interloper Steals Lunch Prepared for Feathered Creatures Despite All Threats.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

The Frank W. Harrolds love birds. They also like squirrels, but when it comes to a choice between birds and squirrels, they will take the birds every time.

They like to do nice things for the birds. Out at their place at Andrews drive, they built a little box outside a window where the birds could drop by for a delightful luncheon of bread crumbs.

For a while their feathered friends came in droves and their happy twitterings as they consumed bread crumbs was a cheerful sound around the Harrold household.

Then a big hulking lump of a gray squirrel discovered the free lunch. In the manner of all such ruffians, he immediately took over.

Now, Harrold is a kindly man. He did not want to shoot the interloper. He did not even want to inflict any great physical discomfort upon him. He decided a threat would be sufficient. So he got a stick and went out and waved it at the squirrel in a threatening manner.

The squirrel kept just far enough out of range of the stick to be safe. When Harrold advanced, he leaped into a tree and berated Harrold, jerking his tail impudently. As soon as Harrold went back in the house he came down out of the tree and ate the bird food again. This occurred several times.

Harrold finally conferred with an electrician. Acting on the electrician's advice, Harrold wired the bird-box with small wires and connected these with a switch within the house.

He fixed it so the charge would not electrocute the squirrel, but would merely give him a good, sound shock.

Harrold then lay in wait within the house and watched. The squirrel came back to the box. He observed the wires. Then he tiptoed carefully over them, being very careful not to touch one. While Harrold glared out the window in impotent rage, he ate the bird food.

Harrold has given up. He confesses himself beaten. He has used all the ingenuity known to man and the squirrel still is triumphant, sleek, fat and impudent.

If anybody knows any means short of war that Harrold can employ next, he will be glad to hear from them.

The Boy Grew Older—Pathos or Pride
No literature today is more chock-full of human questions than the Want Ad pages of your favorite newspaper—The Constitution, for instance.

Can't you imagine the mingled feeling of regret and pride which prompted a mother recently to advertise a baby bed for sale? The baby had grown out of babyhood—a man stood on the threshold of life. Perhaps the mother didn't want the baby bed around to remind her of vanishing innocence; perhaps she merely needed cash to buy the boy bigger clothes.

Anyway—she sold the bed.

Atlanta's Cold Siege To Be Broken Today
Atlanta's cold siege will be broken today, Glen Jefferson, regional meteorologist, said yesterday as he predicted the mercury would not drop below 38 degrees and would rise to 60 this afternoon.

The warm weather will be accompanied by partly cloudy skies, he said.

Monday's extremes were 23 and 55.

400,000-Ton Output Yearly Will Be Goal Of Proposed Plants

Factories Will Supplement Other Sources, Providing All Military, Essential Civilian Needs.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—A $400,000,000 government program for production of synthetic rubber—designed to make the United States independent of the Far East for all military and many civilian rubber needs—was announced today.

Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator, disclosed the plan following a conference in which President Roosevelt approved it.

Under the plan, Jones said, enough synthetic rubber will be coming out of American factories in 18 months "to supply all military and limited civilian needs."

Jones told a press conference that he anticipated there would be enough rubber at that time to make new automobile tires available to the public.

400,000-Ton Capacity.
The new rubber factories will be designed to produce about 400,000 tons of synthetic rubber per year and, Jones added, "if it develops that more is needed, the capacity will be provided."

In addition to these factories, the nation will have, the official explained, about 90,000 tons per year of other synthetic rubber from factories already operating or under construction, plus some natural rubber from South America and Africa and from the rubber-bearing guayule shrub which grows wild in Mexico and Texas and has been cultivated to some extent in California.

Jones pointed out that in 1941, the greatest rubber consumption year in history, the nation used about 750,000 tons of rubber without stinting civilian demand.

To Use Crude Oil.
The new artificial rubber is to be made primarily by the butadiene process, which uses crude oil as the base. Jones said nearly all the leading oil companies would join in making this basic material, and nearly all the leading rubber and chemical companies would band together to process the material and make the artificial rubber.

The technical and scientific skill of many of the companies as well as existing patents have been pooled to insure maximum efficiency and production, Jones said.

He said he did not know exactly what the rubber would cost but guessed it would run about 30 cents a pound compared with 20 cents being paid currently for natural rubber.

Supply Cut Off.
The bulk of the world's rubber comes from the Dutch East Indies and other portions of the Far East. The Japanese attack has cut off the United States from this source of supply.

However, Jones said there was enough natural rubber already stored in the United States, or on

33 Jap Planes Destroyed by U. S. Bombers

Dutch and Allied Pilots Score Hits on Two Cruisers.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
United States bombers attacking a base in Thailand pounded the Japanese air force there unrelentingly over the weekend and smashed 33 Japanese planes, the Chinese radio broadcast last night from Chungking. The American fliers acted in co-operation with the RAF.

Meanwhile the Japanese invader appeared to be hacking his way forward both in the Dutch East Indies and Singapore theaters, but the American-Filipino line still was beating him off on Luzon and defeat still marched with his retreating German associates in Russia.

In the newest area of the vast Japanese offensive there was heavy fighting about the enemy's two Indies beachheads—the island oil center of Tarakan, off northeast Borneo, and at Minahassa, in northeastern Celebes—and the fact that the Dutch command did not indicate how matters were going afield strongly suggested that the initial test was turning against the defenders.

For these apparent successes, however, the Japanese were paying a high price. Dutch and Allied pilots—these latter by all the signs were Americans and Australians—had up to yesterday scored direct hits on two Japanese cruisers and four troopships, caused probable bomb damage to a third Japanese cruiser and a destroyer, and shot down seven invading planes.

The Japanese claimed the fall of both Tarakan and Menado, the principal city of Minahassa. This was unconfirmed, and possibly mere propaganda, but in any case the Dutch in London made no effort to conceal the gravity of the situation. One informant there

Nazi 'Unrest' Stories 'Planted,' Writer Says

(Henry J. Taylor was the last American journalist to get into and out of Germany before the United States entered the war.)

By HENRY J. TAYLOR.
For North American Newspaper Alliance.
NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Fresh from Berlin, I warn you against stories of revolt in Germany flooding American newspapers. Incredible as it seems to editors and readers alike, this is not bad news for Hitler. The truth is that whatever trouble there is in Germany, Hitler wants multiplied by 10 for the eyes and ears of the American people.

Those are his orders, and Goebbels is getting results. It's vital to the German army, absolutely essential for German victory.

Here is the reason: Consider this "news" in our papers from the German viewpoint, which we seldom do. Remember bad stories about Germany, revolt, sabotage, unrest, are read only by Hitler's enemies, America and England. They are not published in Germany. Not one word. They do not reach the German people themselves. They do not hurt Hitler's own war effort or embarrass his position at home in the slightest. They just don't exist there.

The thing they do is undermine Germany's enemies, who are abroad. Nothing is more important to Hitler than that. It's absolutely fundamental in all Nazi technique.

Nazi censors would pass any story I would write about trouble among the German people, unrest, sabotage. Why did Dr. Sallet, American university graduate, chief of Von Ribbentrop's press office, give me a lecture on the trouble they were having with their own people? Why did Otto Dietrich, Goebbels' news chief, sing songs of unrest and dissent?

West Coast Invasion Planned by Japs, Korean Spy Reveals

By BLAIR BOLLES.

For North American Newspaper Alliance.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Japan's destiny will be fulfilled only if the last bit of American influence in the Pacific is wiped out, and with that aim guiding its whole beligerent program, the Japanese government has conceived a war plan whose climax is to come when Japanese soldiers invade the Panama Canal Zone, Alaska and the three Pacific states, California, Oregon and Washington.

That statement is the burden of a fascinating book in Japanese characters which a Korean patriot, dedicating his life to hate for the Japanese, stole in a Los Angeles hotel a year ago this month from a high officer of the dread Black Dragon Society, whose members are the strong men in the formulation and conduct of Tokyo's militaristic policy. The book's title is "The Three-Power Alliance and the U. S.-Japanese War."

Treachery Forecast.
The book, now being translated into English here, forecasts the deceitful manner of the war's beginning and traced the diplomatic duplicity which was to precede the attack on Hawaii. From there on it tells in riveting detail the prospective story of Japanese successes from India to Kamchatka which Tokyo considers a necessary preliminary to the assault on the United States.

Kilsoo Haan, the Korean who obtained the book, sent copies and English abstracts of it to the State and War Departments last March. He warned American officials that they had only to read in order to grasp the enormous villainy of the Japanese design. Apparently no heed was paid to the book. The State Department said Monday that Mr. Haan communicated so frequently with the department that only a painstaking search through the files would disclose the nature of his various warnings.

Book Stolen in Hotel.
The State Department had forgotten about his book, Mr. Haan is the secretary of the Sino-Korean People's League, whose purpose is the delivery of Korea from the Japanese domination exercised since 1910. Mr. Haan guides a network of spies, many of them in Japan, who have sent him much secret information. He has made a practice of passing this information on to our government. Korea can hope for independence only if the United States is victorious over Japan.

Secret Korean agents in Tokyo informed Haan that the Black Dragon Society officer was on his way from Japan to California with the extraordinary book. According to Haan, the officer intended to give it to the leaders of anti-American pro-Japanese subversive activities on our west coast.

The book was to encourage the subversive agents by demonstrating to them that Japan was prepared for action. Haan rented a room in the hotel where the Black Dragon visitor was staying and made off with the precious document. The nature of his business held the officer from summoning the police.

False Peace Disclosure.

The book disclosed that Japan intended to negotiate for peace up to the very moment it struck with war. It describes in detail the method of attack on the Philippines, built around the use of Lingayen and Lamon bays as landing points for the troops. When Luzon falls, Japan, according to the book, plans to accord the Filipinos their "independence" and set up a puppet government as they have done in Nanking and Manchuria.

According to the book, the war is now in its first stage. The plan calls for three stages in all. Stage one, scheduled to last four months, is calculated to bring to Japan control over the Philippines, Guam, Wake, Midway, Hongkong, Borneo and Malaya. The book said Guam would fall in five days. It took four. It said Hongkong would fall in nine days. It took 12. It says the Philippines will fall in six weeks.

The scope of the plan for stage two is so vast that it seems fantastic. Japan protects herself on the south by the capture of the Dutch Indies, Australia and New Zealand. Japan protects herself in the rear by the reduction of Burma and India. Japan establishes herself in strategic position for the assault on the United States by seizing Kamchatka, the Siberian peninsula north of Japan, and all the Pacific islands.

Hawaii is among these islands. The book has a message for the thousands of Japanese in Hawaii, where Haan once worked in the Japanese consulate in the interest of his revolutionary espionage activities. It instructs them to cooperate with the United States until stage two is near fulfillment and then to aid in the fall of Hawaii by active Fifth Column work.

Stage three, the great climax, is contingent on the success of the plan's first two stages. The book expresses the hope that the United States, upon the fall of Hawaii and the disappearance into the Japanese maw of all the other Pacific territories, will sue for peace.

At the outset, Japan, according to the book, expected the United States to require two months before being in a position really to fight. By that time the Black Dragon Society trusted it would be late. Every piece of territory gained in stage one simplifies the problem of carrying out stage two.

Uncertainty About Reds.
The book takes into consideration diplomatic possibilities. It suggests that Russia might enter the Pacific war against Japan but guesses that the Soviet Union will stay out of it, as a result of uncertainty about what is coming, long enough for the completion of stage one. It also takes into consideration the possibility of Japanese reverses and the likelihood of bombing of Japan, but it indicates a confidence that the reverses can be overcome and the bombing will accomplish little.

Haan is translating the work, which will make a book of about 200 printed pages in English. Little Brown Company, of Boston, plans to bring out the translated book this spring, and Collier's magazine has arranged to publish in detail the story behind the book and about Haan's work. The book contains naval secrets, including the details of Japanese war vessel armament, as well as the outline of the strategy plan.

The original book is the work of one Matsuo, according to Haan. Matsuo is a member of the Japanese Naval Society and belongs to the Black Dragon. The deduction is that he is close to the high command. One interesting suggestion imparted directly by the book is that Japan was planning her own operations independent of German desires. Haan has information that Saburo Kurosu suggested to Berlin that Japan join the Axis through the tripartite pact of September, 1940, rather than the other way around.

U.S. Announces Plan To Meet Rubber Needs

route to this country — a supply estimated at 600,000 tons — plus enough used rubber to fill the most urgent needs until the new synthetic rubber plants can get into operation "by the middle of next year."

Jones said the outlook for filling tin requirements were "pretty bright." He said that the first American tin smelter at Texas City, Tex., will be completed in April and will have a capacity of nearly 30,000 tons a year instead of the originally planned capacity of 18,000 tons. Tin ore for the smelter is coming from Bolivia. Heretofore, this country has depended on Malaya for tin.

To Boost Output.
Jones also announced that in order to stimulate the production of zinc, lead and copper, the government-owned Metals Reserve Company will start paying a premium February 1 on output in excess of the production formerly achieved by American firms.

He said quotas to determine what production is extra will be announced later by the Office of Price Administration.

A bonus of about five cents a pound will be paid for extra copper production and 2 3/4 cents for extra lead and zinc. The plan will run for two and one-half years from February 1.

The total price for bonus copper will be 17 cents a pound "Connecticut valley," for zinc 11 cents a pound "East St. Louis," and for lead 9 1/4 cents a pound "New York."

Red Cross War Fund Reaches $178,756 Here

Chairman Brewer Reports $140,000 Still Needed to Fill Quota.

Atlanta's contribution to the Red Cross war fund yesterday reached a total of $178,756.23, short $140,000 of the city's quota of $320,000. Oby T. Brewer, chairman of the appeal, urged all those who had not been contacted either to take their contribution to headquarters at 61 Forsyth street, or mail it to Post Office Box 1872.

"We haven't enough workers to reach everybody," he said. Yesterday's contributions amounted to $12,953.23, $2,900 of which came from Sears, Roebuck and $4,872 from Sears, Roebuck employees. The company also sent $400 to the DeKalb Red Cross fund. American Telephone & Telegraph employees contributed $373.51, the Maryland Baking Company $100, J. M. Delta Training Girls for Jobs With Air Line

Young Women Will Take Places of Men Now Under Arms.

The first class of young women employed by Delta Air Lines to fill vacancies left by men entering the armed services reported for "school" yesterday at the Municipal airport.

The 17 comely young women will receive a month's training and later will be assigned jobs in the traffic, operation, and reservations department of the airline in various southern cities.

They will eventually qualify as radio operators, handle air mail and express, decode and interpret weather data, deal with passengers and serve as ticket agents, prepare forms for flight operations and assume numerous other duties now performed by men. C. E. Woolman, vice president and general manager, said the policy of hiring women for the first time in many of the airline jobs will release men to other posts calling for technical skill and long experience.

"We are making no effort at present to develop feminine mechanics or pilots," he said, "but we realize that women can handle efficiently many jobs now filled by men and we intend to give them the opportunity."

The training school will be conducted by John L. Sutton, superintendent of the line's passenger service, while various department heads will assist with instruction. Written tests will be given daily to review the studies.

Some of the young women who attended the class yesterday are married, but the majority are single. The unmarried women were requested to refrain from having dates during the training period, and to concentrate on learning their jobs.

The class included: Anderson Dumas, Mary Elizabeth Freeman, Mary Gregory Granzer, Winifred Noble Horton, Alys Celine Lewis, Mary Jane Smith, Emma Leila Surles and Frances Young, all of Atlanta, and Beatrice Booth, of Madison, Ga., and Geneva Veale, of Watkinsonville, Ga.

Quite often, when I'm out of soap, I think I'll type some brilliant story about conditions of the weather. But I am always doubtful whether the sun will shine or rain will splatter before my stuff is printed matter.

As this is writ I shake and shiver, from cars and toes to thighs and liver. I slipped and slid on icy hills and risked enormous surgeon's bills because with economy I fully walked a half-mile to my toilet.

I pride myself on wearing shorts through summer's heat and various sorts of temperatures and other stages of weather. When the north wind rages I tackle it—and nearly freeze when old Boreas bites my knickers.

But when this hits your front veranda it may be that a Giant Panda from that Far East might think it hot. Or else, perhaps, he might think not.

No matter how my fancy ranges Atlanta weather always changes. We have more weather in a week than any region you may seek. One knows not whether he should wear the fur of a lambent bear or cast in imitation of Key West.

"My Novel" Again.
Verily, yea verily, it payeth to advertise. Business office, please note.

Few days ago I discussed books of the long ago, books few folk read these days. Among others, Bulwer's "My Novel." I think I wondered if a copy might be extant.

Next day came a copy of "My Novel" wearing the compliments of Longworth's Book Shop. I think I'll drop a hint about a first folio edition of William Shakespeare. It would be nice to keep on the living table or sell for half-a-million.

With due appreciation of the gift, I fear I shall not attempt reading "My Novel," again. There are 486 pages of it. Published by John B. Alden. Its pages look mighty dull at a glance.

The title page says: "My Novel," or "Varieties in English Life." All books had subtitles or a choice of titles in those days. Even the dime novels—"Mystery of the Kitchen" or "Who Stole the Goose." The author is given as "Pisistratus Caxton," because this story is told in the first person by this hypothetical eccentric. But it bears also the name: "Sir Edward Bulwer-Lytton, Bart." who would use up a lot of room in electric lights on a theater marquee.

If my memory hasn't gone the way of all flesh I read "My Novel" as a young—very young—freshman at Auburn. The college—just wasn't much more than a high school then, building its first real football team—had a good library as far as it went.

"WE FARMERS."
Continuing the discussion of yesterday's column on the subject of farmers and the national defense, I should like to report a passage or two from a conversation with a veteran son of the soil with whom I talked the other day. He is 87, has lived on the same farm all his life, and his father cleared the land 20 years before this man was born.

"How are the farmers getting along?" I asked him.
"We're still here," he replied, shaking the ashes from his corn-cob pipe with a stem about a foot long. "You were raised on a farm, and I don't have to remind you that farmers have been right up against it now for some while. Our government has been trying to help us, but I don't know whether it is wise to help folks too much. Trouble with all subsidizing plans is that the more you give a fellow, the more he wants. That's been by objection to so much of this federal aid. I figure that the way we got our start in this country was by hard work and careful attention to every dollar we made—making two blades grow where one had grown—teaching our children all we knew, and especially training them about the family altar to study God's Book and rely upon Him for daily strength."

He went on to tell me how the labor situation on the farm has grown from bad to worse until today the average farmer can't depend from one day to the next on labor. This, he concluded, would mean less and less cotton in Georgia, which, he said, might not be a bad thing in itself, but pointing out, nevertheless, that many sections of Georgia can't grow other money crops, and that when cotton is eliminated, because of the labor situation and the loss of foreign markets, many farmers face a stone wall.

"But we've still got enough to eat," he said, "that is for those who are willing to work. But do you know, there are plenty of folks in my county that will gather up what few eggs they get and take them off to the filling station to pay for a gallon or two of gas to burn up in worn-out cars that are still mortgaged? I reckon this tire bama just then inclined to exercise his right of free press on colleges. Else, I fear, I would have missed some entertaining reading, bordering on the pornographic. I don't know how the books got there, except for their established claim to being literature. Early English literature. Fielding's "Tom Jones," all about his amorous adventures. "Moll Flanders," the purported autobiography of a woman who loved hotly and often and usually with disaster.

Talk about sex in ultra modern novels! You should go back to the pioneers to get the real dirt. Even Shakespeare. And, if you come to that, certain chapters of the Old Testament.

Drug Scarcity.

War in Europe and hampered transportation has brought on a shortage of numerous drugs and the newer war in the East Indies is going to make others scarce or impossible to obtain, according to Joe Harrison, of the Cobb County Times.

Joe, who had a chat with a local druggist who handed out the sad news.

Arnica, he said, comes from Siberia and the mountains of Europe. Rather, it doesn't come. Asafetida originates in Afghanistan, and I join Joe in saying it can stay there. I never wore a little bag of asafetida around my neck to ward off colds, but some of the other kids in school did—and I can smell it yet. And I hate to try to spell it.

Belladonna, growing in southwestern Europe, is out, too. Oculists—some of them—use it to dilate the eyes of patients being tested for glasses.

Cocaine and morphine—in case you just must have a shot—are Asiatic products and hard to get. Joe's druggist friend said there's a pretty big stock on hand in this country. But the prices are sky-high. Tough on the addicts.

Quinine and camphor are also getting down to the bottom of the barrel and more will be difficult to get.

I may be lacking in sentimentality but I can't get all worked up over eight-year-old boys and 90-year-old men with one leg who offer their services to the recruiting agencies. They know they won't get in. Unless they're dumber than I like to think.

Sports department says you need a special license to shoot almost anything these days. Except Japanese, perhaps. And it's open season on them.

Half-a-dozen odd sizes of tires may be bought without restriction, says a news item, having been declared on the "obsolete list." Maybe you could cut your car wheels to fit 'em.

War Is Discussed By Bishop Moore

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 12.—(AP)—Bishop Arthur J. Moore, of the Methodist church, told University students today that "we stabbed to death collective security after the first World War."

"This time," he said, "we must build upon a foundation of Christian ideals."

Addressing a mass meeting of students at the annual Religion-in-Life Week at the University, the bishop said nations do not die from outside attacks—"they commit suicide from within by forgetting religion."

He said citizens should recapture the religious idealism of the founding fathers; revive the American "conscience" of older days and "accept the religious way of life in all things."

"It's either Christ or chaos," the former missionary said.

Tuggle Case Witness Has Disappeared

Contempt Hearing for Defendant in Graft Count Postponed.

At a hearing yesterday on contempt proceedings against John Tuggle, charged with tampering with a grand jury witness, it was stated that the witness had disappeared. The proceedings were then postponed by Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy, of Fulton superior court, until noon next Monday.

Tuggle, a salesman for I. Weinkle, was one of 20 indicted by the grand jury as the result of the state graft investigation. The missing witness is the American-born wife of John Kwong, a Chinese. Her husband, who was in court, said that his wife left his home a week ago and that he had not heard from her since.

Mrs. Kwong, it was said, appeared twice before the grand jury as a witness against Tuggle and urged her to tell him what had happened in the grand jury room. It further states that Mrs. Kwong refused to do so and returned to the courthouse to report Tuggle's alleged act to Solicitor General John A. Boykin. Later, on January 8, the petition charges that Tuggle went to the cafe where Mrs. Kwong was working as a waitress, called her vile names and threatened "to fix her" if she testified in court. The petition also alleges that at that time Tuggle had a pistol in his possession. It describes Mrs. Kwong as having been "for many months an associate of John Tuggle."

Tuggle is a resident of Decatur.

Supreme Court Rules Georgia Law Illegal

Labor Statute of 1903 Held Void on 'Peonage' Ground.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—The supreme court held unconstitutional today a 1903 Georgia statute challenged by the Justice Department on the ground that it produced "peonage."

Justice Byrnes wrote the 8 to 0 decision. Justice Roberts did not participate.

The legislation made anyone a "common cheat and swindler" subject to punishment who contracted to perform personal services with the intent of obtaining money in advance and then not carrying out the agreement.

The decision was on an appeal by Ira Taylor, a Negro, who was convicted in the Wilkinson county superior court of violating the statute. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $35 and costs or "do work in the public work camp for a period of six months."

Justice Byrnes said that the sections of the Georgia code under which the defendant was convicted were "repugnant to the 13th amendment" to the federal constitution which prohibits slavery or involuntary servitude except as punishment for crime. He added that "the conviction must therefore be reversed."

Taylor was alleged to have contracted to work for R. L. Hardie at $1.25 a day in building a house and to have obtained an advance of $19.50 and then failed to carry out the agreement.

Filing a brief as "friend of the court," the Justice Department said the Georgia statute "hinders the enforcement in that state of federal criminal statutes safeguarding civil rights secured by the constitution and laws of the United States."

"Recent federal investigations in Georgia," the Justice Department said, "have disclosed that the involuntary service of debtors has been coerced in whole or in part by the threat of prosecution under the state statute."

Prosecution Still Possible, Camp Says

United States District Attorney Lawrence Camp yesterday said he construed the supreme court's action as invalidating that section of Georgia's code setting up arbitrary presumption of fraud. He expressed belief prosecution still might be brought under the act, but henceforth the state would have the burden of proof that fraud was intended.

The case was carried to the supreme court in behalf of Taylor by the commission on inter-racial co-operation, a southern group. The commission first retained Thomas T. Purdom as attorney, and carried the case to the Georgia supreme court. When that body affirmed the Wilkinson county superior court conviction, the commission brought in another attorney, Leonard Haas, to join Purdom in the appeal to the supreme court of the United States.

R. B. Eleazer, spokesman for the commission, said the group had sought for some time a case which would test the code's constitutionality, and accepted Taylor's conviction as basis for the appeal.

Phosphate Vital to Victory, Says Lilienthal

"Phosphate—and more and more phosphate—is necessary if American farmers are to avoid the catastrophes of the last World War," said David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, last night, speaking at Wesley Memorial church before a general session of the American Institute of Co-operation, attended by several hundred leaders in agricultural co-operative efforts drawn from 30 states.

"Expansion of phosphate production is imperative," Lilienthal continued. "If we are to feed our armies."

The TVA head revealed the significance of President Roosevelt's recommendation to congress to provide funds for a large chemical plant on the gulf coast, near Mobile.

Plant Being Changed.
At the Muscle Shoals plant, built under the Wilson administration for the manufacture of nitrates, TVA has produced highly concentrated fertilizers, Lilienthal said. By minor changes it is being adapted so almost its full capacity may be used to make elemental phosphorus.

Sessions of the American Institute of Co-operation began yesterday morning, with a general meeting at Wesley Memorial church and a series of group conferences at several downtown hotels.

One of these a conference on livestock marketing was led by Milton P. Jarnagin of the College of Agriculture of the University of Georgia.

"Building of a successful cotton co-operative in the south will be accomplished only if the program includes purchase and operation by local associations of facilities for handling cotton," said D. W. Brooks, manager of the Georgia Cotton Producers Association. He spoke before the cotton group at the Ansley hotel. He referred to gins, warehouses, and cottonseed oil mills. He urged co-operative buying of feed, seed supplies, and farm tools.

Importance of farm co-operation in national defense was discussed in an address by A. G. Black, head of the Farm Credit Administration at Washington.

"Food for victory" was Black's theme. "The whole food problem will bulk largely in the winning of the war. Every possible agricultural force is being mustered. Every enterprise, whether it be a big co-operative or a small individual farm, will be dovetailed into this titanic undertaking."

J. K. Luck, county agent of Sumter county, Georgia, reported that Georgia farmers are fast learning the value of better grades of cattle and hogs.

"We have had a co-operative livestock auction only two years," he said. "But already a big difference is shown. This year, for the first time, all our 4-H Club calves were produced in our own county."

Other speakers at general meetings and group conferences included: C. D. Phillips, University of Kentucky, on livestock marketing; Rory A. Collins, Oregon, a "dirt farmer" apple grower in the famous Hood river region, who spoke on the importance of studying, grading and packing.

Today's sessions of the American Institute of Co-operation, starting with a general meeting at 9:30 o'clock at Wesley Memorial church, will include a series of special conferences on various farm crops. Columbus Roberts, of Georgia, will talk about co-operation in milk distribution. He is president of the Georgia Milk Producers' Milk Confederation. William C. Bewley, Macon, manager of the Georgia Peach Growers' Exchange, will discuss peach sales and shipments. Co-operative purchasing will be the subject of an afternoon group session.

WGST Hearing Is Recessed Until February

FCC Declares Delay When Two Witnesses Unable To Appear.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Hearing on Georgia Tech's application for renewal of the license of its radio station WGST, Atlanta, was recessed until February 2 by Federal Communications Commission Examiner Rosel Hyde after a short session today.

The recess was declared because several attorneys in the case had previous engagements for this week and because two witnesses, Sam Pickard, former member of the Federal Radio Commission, and Arthur Lucas were unable to appear.

Lucas' absence was attributed to illness by John E. McClure, special counsel for the state.

McClure said he would take Lucas' testimony by deposition if illness from making a personal appearance when the hearing resumed.

FCC Attorney Marcus Cohn, however, asked that a further postponement be granted if necessary until Lucas' health permitted him to appear because "I want the commissioner to observe the witness as he testifies."

Examiner Hyde did not rule on the point.

Coalitionists Urged To Aid War Effort

Hoover Is Proposed for Price Control Administrator.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Representative Joseph W. Martin Jr., the Republican leader, suggesting tonight that President Roosevelt call in Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats of demonstrative ability to help in the war effort, proposed former President Herbert Hoover for price control administrator.

The Massachusetts representative, minority leader of the house and also chairman of the Republican national committee, made the recommendation in the Washington Star radio forum, broadcast over NBC.

"I think it cannot be denied," he said, "that Mr. Hoover at the head of price control, for instance, would give the nation greater confidence than those who now exercise that control."

Leon W. Henderson now is head of the Office of Price Administration.

Willkie Mentioned. Along with Hoover Martin mentioned Wendell Willkie, Alf Landon, Thomas E. Dewey, Alfred E. Smith, Joseph B. Ely, John W. Hanes and Lewis W. Douglas as men whose "talent and experience" the President "might do well to call himself of."

Willkie and Landon were Mr. Roosevelt's opponents in the last two presidential elections and Dewey was the 1938 Republican candidate for governor of New York. Smith, 1928 presidential nominee; Ely, former Massachusetts Governor; Hanes, former assistant secretary of the treasury, and Douglas, former budget director, all are Democrats who have been critical of some administration domestic policies.

Asserting "there are no partisan lines" in the nation's determination to win the war, Martin called for "an end to the bickerings and the jealousies which characterize some parts of the administration in the war effort."

"This is the hour for efficiency, for the selection of the right man for the job, and the end of politics in determining the selection of our administrators," he said. "The people are being called upon to make tremendous sacrifices. They demand the greatest nonpartisan efficiency and economy procurable; among other more than 130,000,000 free, capable people."

Martin expressed certainty "there is no difference of view that the bi-party system of government must be preserved" and that "the elections of 1942 must go ahead."

"To dispense with the elections," he said, "would be to discontinue our American form of government. Once discontinued, it might be impossible to restore."

Employer representatives on the board are: A. W. Hawkes, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; president of Consensus, Nairn, Inc.; Roger D. Employer alternates are: L. N. Bent, vice president of the Hercules Powder Company; R. R. Deupree, president of Procter & Gamble Company; James W. Hook, president of the Geometric Tool Company; and H. B. Horton, of the Chicago Bridge & Iron Corporation.

The Labor Board was created as a result of a conference of labor and industry spokesmen which met here on December 17 at the call of the President to work out some method of halting strikes or lockouts for the duration of the war.

A tremendous clamor had developed in congress for anti-strike legislation, particularly after representatives of the CIO withdrew from the National Defense Mediation Board.

The presidential order tonight provided that six members or alternates, including not less than two from each of the groups represented on the board, shall constitute a quorum. It was provided also that a vacancy in the board should not impair the right of the remaining members to exercise the board's powers.

The old Defense Mediation Board, set up last March 19, was abolished and provision was made for the transfer of all its employees, records, property and funds to the new War Labor Board.

Veteran Flyer Has Wild Ride On Kuibyshev-Moscow Flight

By ERIC McLOUGHLIN. For The North American Newspaper Alliance. KUIBYSHEV, Jan. 12.—(By Wireless)—I have flown across the Atlantic and the Pacific, across the United States and over the sea from Portugal to England, but I never have had a flight in which I was so completely reduced to a state of jitters as I was on a flight in a Russian bomber from Kuibyshev to Moscow.

With a howling blizzard raging, the pilot apparently decided that the best method to keep on his course was to get as near the earth as possible without actually hitting it. Sometimes as we banked along snow-covered roads "to have a look at road signs," I imagined that I was in a super-racing car instead of a plane.

I could see woodpiles, back yards and houses and felt that I could easily have shouted a greeting to the residents if I had time and the engines had not been roaring so loudly.

We hurtled into the Moscow airport at a steady 200 or so and while I was still wondering what would be the initial maneuvers before the plane was put down, we were on the ground. It was the fastest landing I ever experienced and it was executed perfectly.

Youth Affected By Films, Stars, Minister Says

Dr. Johnson Asserts Influence More Profound Than Church.

By DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT. "Moving pictures and movie stars are today having more influence in typing the lives of our young people than the church and the ministers," said Dr. Henry Johnson in an address yesterday to the Atlanta Methodist Ministers Association.

Continuing his address as guest speaker on the subject, "Religion and Mental Health," Dr. Johnson stated that Protestant ministers for 25 years had been held up to ridicule, and asserted that a dozen movies like "One Foot in Heaven" quickly would prove effective in doubling the enrollment at our theological seminaries.

"Psychology should be made to work for us, rather than against us," said he. "Religion is a natural therapy, and psychology is peculiarly the field of the minister, enabling him to diagnose moral problems and the adoption of right attitudes in his ministry to the mentally oppressed."

Atlanta Methodist pastors yesterday voted that their weekly meetings are to be held at the First Methodist church each Monday at 10:30 o'clock, instead of at Wesley Memorial church.

U. S. Transport Destroyed Off Alaskan Coast

7,314-Ton Ship Burns But Personnel Saved; Cause Probed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Destruction by fire of the army transport Cliven in Alaskan waters was reported today by the War Department.

The ship, a combination passenger and freight vessel of 7,314 tons, was said to be a total loss, but all personnel were saved.

The cause of the fire is being investigated, the War Department said, without indicating whether it was believed to have resulted from enemy action.

The loss was reported in a late day communique. The communique said the Hawaiian Department commander had advised that of 397 soldiers wounded in the December 7 bombing of Pearl Harbor, 55 had returned to duty and the early recovery of most of the others was expected.

DO WE HAVE TO DIE?

A strange man in Los Angeles, known as "The Voice of Two Worlds," reveals the story of a remarkable system that often leads to almost unbelievable improvement in power of mind, achievement of brilliant business and professional success and new happiness. Many report improvements in health. Others tell of increased bodily strength, magnetic personality, courage and poise.

The man, a well-known explorer and geographer, tells how he found these strange methods in far-off and mysterious Tibet, often called the land of miracles by the few travelers permitted to visit it. He discloses how he learned rare wisdom and long-hidden practices, closely guarded for three thousand years by the sages, which enabled many to perform amazing feats. He maintains that these immense powers are latent in all of us, and that methods for using them are now simplified so that they can be used by almost any person with ordinary intelligence.

He maintains that man, instead of being limited by a one-man-power-mind, has within him the mind-power of a thousand men or more as well as the energy-power of a thousand horses.

The author states that he has come for this long-hidden system to be disclosed to the Western world, and offers to send his amazing 9,000-word treatise—which reveals many startling results—to sincere readers of this paper, free of cost or obligation. For your free copy, address: The Institute of Mentalhygiene, 713 South Hobart Blvd., Dept. 130L, Los Angeles, Cal. Readers are urged to write promptly, as only a limited number of the free treatises have been printed.—(adv.)

City To Study Big Post-War Street Building Program

A $30,000,000 after-the-war street improvement program, including opening of new streets, widening of thoroughfares, construction of viaducts and underpasses to provide an "inner by-pass" for traffic and to cushion any post-war depression, will be studied by the city planning commission when it meets at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon to reorganize for the year.

Under the program as outlined by Raymond W. Torres, engineering secretary of the city planning commission, and T. Elton Drake, commission chairman, the inner by-pass will be bounded by Ashby street on the west; University avenue on the south; Moreland avenue on the east and Fourteenth street on the north.

Plans for a projected outer by-pass will await development of metropolitan traffic plans now under consideration, and the inner plan will conform and supplement the outer by-pass program, it was said.

Tentative Sanction

The inner by-pass program was developed after a series of conferences with federal agencies and officials who are said to have given tentative sanction to the program, pointing out federal expenditures after the war effort probably will go to communities which have a well defined and approved program ready for execution.

The program will make the central business section easily accessible to vehicles and at the same time provide a route through which traffic will not be forced to traverse congested areas, proponents say.

Eighteen major projects are included in the inner program, which also provides that traffic be shuttled across Piedmont and Grant Parks by means of huge viaducts.

Briefly the program provides for extension of Amsterdam avenue to Briarcliff road; construction of a viaduct over Piedmont Park; extension of Fourteenth street to Ashby street; Ashby street extension and underpass under Lee street and the Central of Georgia railway and connection with University avenue.

Southern Rail Viaduct. Viaduct over Southern railway and Capitol avenue, with the completion of the above named projects providing one portion of the inner by-pass; viaduct over Hill street; extension of University avenue to Moreland avenue; underpasses under the Central of Georgia railway at Lee street at Rose circle, McCall's crossing, Fort McPherson entrance and Lakewood, with each underpass having "clover-leaf" connections and eliminating 11 grade crossings.

A new highway to drain traffic from the Buford highway as well as the North Atlanta area, relieving Peachtree road and Piedmont avenue; connection with Williams street and into Techwood drive at Bartow street; Techwood drive extended to Luckie street; Bartow street widened and extended to the junction of Mitchell and Elliott streets over a new viaduct parallel with Spring street; a new artery would extend from the last mentioned junction to the intersection of Nelson and Walker streets; Nelson and Chapel streets would be widened and extended to Lee street. These would form a major artery from the northeast to the south and west.

Juniper Extended. Juniper street would be extended and the Courtland-Juniper connection would drain to the east of the central street, but equally as close as Bartow street; widening of DeKalb avenue and the extension of it into Edgewood avenue; connection of Simpson street and Jones avenue and the construction of the Jones avenue bridge; connection of Alexander street and Forrest avenue and extension with Austin and Euclid avenues.

Construction of a new underpass for Boulevard under the Georgia railway and widening of Boulevard to a fast north and south artery; construction of the east North avenue underpass; construction of the west North avenue underpass and extension of North avenue into Bankhead avenue also included in the plans.

Ban on Practice Blackouts in Georgia Lifted

Plans for Early Test
Here To Be Made
Thursday.

The ban on practice blackouts in Georgia was lifted yesterday by the Third Interceptor Command in Tampa, Fla., as the following other developments took place in the local defense setup:

1. Brigadier General E. G. Peyton said plans for an early practice blackout in Atlanta would be made at a meeting of military and civilian directors of the municipal defense council at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

2. Approximately 1,480 volunteer air raid wardens and other defense workers will assemble at a rally at 8 o'clock tonight at the Kirkwood school. Principal speakers will be S. W. Graydon, director of civilian protection; Councilman James E. Jackson, chairman of the defense council; General Peyton, Colonel F. W. Benteen, sixth district military director; Marvin Thomas, police instructor in traffic; and Captain J. L. Ivey, fire instructor in civilian defense.

3. Registrars of volunteers will begin this afternoon at all drug stores in that portion of Atlanta lying in DeKalb county north of the Georgia railway. Women volunteers will assist in the registration.

Lieutenant Colonel Richard C. Job, of the Citizens Defense Committee, released a letter from the Third Interceptor Command in Tampa declaring that practice blackouts could be held by individual counties, cities and towns that wanted to act on their own initiative, provided they comply with certain requirements. When the Army desires a practice blackout it will give the state, 48 hours' notice.

Instructions for practice sessions were listed as follows:
The public must be fully advised that the blackout is for practice purposes only.

Co-ordination Required.
Police radios must continue in operation.
There must be no interruption to through traffic of common carriers.

Co-ordination must be effected with hospitals, police, railroads, bus lines, airplanes, and all other important facilities.

Commercial broadcast stations should announce they are theoretically blacked out, but have been directed to continue broadcasting with interruptions from time to time to keep the public informed as to the progress of practice blackout.

Co-ordination should be effected between state defense committee, district wardens, and military and naval establishments in the area concerned. Headquarters of the Third Interceptor Command should be notified of practices to be held.

Radio blackout of facilities such as CAA and blackout of light-houses and of hazard lights such as those on water tanks and radio towers should be momentary only, and should be simply for the purpose of testing methods of accomplishing blackouts and radio silence.

At the same time the Third Interceptor Command suggested that the following precautions be taken during a blackout:
(1) All lights visible from the air shall be extinguished; (2) if driving a vehicle, pull over to the curb, stop and extinguish lights; (3) keep streets clear for authorized emergency travel which shall proceed without lights; and (4) do not smoke in the open.

General Peyton pointed out that part of Atlanta's eight districts already are organized and ready to function, but added some of them still need recruits badly.

"We are going to hold a practice blackout in Atlanta just as soon as we are ready for it and that should be very soon," he said.

Although there were no figures yesterday on the number of permits for tires and tubs already issued in Fulton county, J. S. Roberts, spokesman for Fulton board, announced a weekly list of those who were receiving tires would be compiled and published in compliance with regulations of the War Department.

To Speed Work.
Meanwhile, headquarters of the state defense committee announced plans were speeding up for a general registration of voluntary defense workers January 23. Registrations which already are under way or will begin before January 23 will go ahead as scheduled.

In this connection the Fulton county civilian defense council urged Negroes to begin registering either at the office of W. A. Aiken, in the Rucker building, 158 Auburn avenue, or the manager's office of University Homes, 668 Fair street, S. W. Registration hours are from 9 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock at night on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and 9 to 6 o'clock on other days.

Davis, assisting in organization of Negroes for the fifth district, said he had never told Negroes they will be paid for their services and urged them to join up and serve without pay as other citizens are doing when the government needs every man available, and there is no conflict between the Atlanta and district organization, for we all are working to the same objective—defense, the maximum defense, possible," he said.

Meanwhile, Police Chief Hornsby announced that day and evening watches of the police department have begun study of their duties during blackouts. He added the morning watch men will begin their studies in the near future.

Chief Hornsby also said that men between 18 and 35 who are arrested for any reason, and found to be without draft registration cards, will be held for investigation, at the request of the FBI.

JASPER, Ga., Jan. 12.—A spectacular fire destroyed the 14-room southern colonial home of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Tate, widow of Captain Howard Tate, of World War I, here Saturday night.

The house was built at the turn of the century by the late Parish Carter Tate, congressman from the ninth district for 20 years. It was valued at $45,000. All of the furnishings from the main floor were removed, but almost all of the contents of the upper floor were a total loss, including jewelry, priceless family heirlooms and many prized mementos of the late congressman, who was the father of the late Captain Howard Tate.

'Burma Road' to Alaska Sought Before Congress
WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(P)—Congress was urged today by its Alaska delegate, Anthony J. Dimond, to expedite construction of a "Burma road" linking the United States with the territory.

"For $25,000,000, Dimond told the house, a road could be constructed from Prince George, British Columbia, to Fairbanks, about 1,500 miles. This highway, he said, could be rushed to completion in a year or more and could be built to provide for landing areas for airplanes.

Only 11,000 Georgians Listed for Defense
Only 11,480 persons out of Georgia's total population of 3,119,953 have registered for civilian defense activities, it was disclosed yesterday in figures released at Washington by Mayor LaGuardia, national director of civilian defense.

The Georgia enrollment compares with 65,000 in Alabama, with a total population of 2,830,285; 55,404 in South Carolina, with a total population of 1,905,815; 45,000 in Mississippi, with a total population of 2,181,763, and 250,000 in Louisiana, with a population totaling 2,360,661.

Tennessee's population of 2,910,982, a total of 9,804 have enrolled.

Blackout Must Be Done Right To Be of Value

Success Depends on Each Person Doing
His Part.

By HAROLD MARTIN.
Sometime in the near future Atlanta is going to have a test blackout.

If it is done right—if every homeowner and every owner of a business does his part, it will be of tremendous value in training a civilian population in protecting itself.

If it isn't done right it won't be worth a hill of beans. It CAN be done right, easily, and not expensively.

Many Atlantans already have taken the simple steps required to blackout their homes.

One Man Ready.
Walter C. Hill, for instance, at his home on Argonne drive, is prepared to turn out all lights in his residence except in three rooms which have been blacked-out. In these rooms he will cover the windows with plywood that fasten simply above the window. Plywood was chosen because it is easy to put up, easy to take down, and in the daytime may be stacked out of the way. Heavy curtains, black paper that rolls up and down, or even blankets also may be used.

In these rooms, a basement room, the kitchen and the bathroom, the lights may be kept on as usual, and the normal life of the family may continue. The Civilian Defense Council prefers this type of precaution to a complete blackout of the home.

Remember, too, in case of an actual raid the blackout is no good if your house is on fire, a beacon to guide bombers. In accordance with Civilian Defense suggestions, Mr. Hill has prepared to handle incendiary bombs. In each broom closet he has placed a bucket of sand, a long-handled shovel and a pair of gloves. He also is prepared to run a hose to any part of the house, for a fine spray of water will put out an incendiary bomb, though a heavy stream will cause it to burn more violently.

Remain Calm.
The big thing to remember, after taking these simple precautions, is to KEEP YOUR WITS ABOUT YOU. Go to the room you have prepared. Stay there. Don't phone. Don't wander out in the blacked-out streets.

A good example of how a large building occupied at night may be blacked out may be found in Emory University hospital.

Emory has ordered heavy blue denim, lined with muslin, for its operating rooms where bright lights MUST stay on. For its service rooms, such as kitchens, supply rooms, etc., they have blacked out the rims of the windows, and over these windows have hung shatter-proof shades. Patients' windows will not be blacked out, but all lights in patients' rooms will be turned off. Patients needing emergency treatment during a blackout will be taken to rooms with blacked out windows. Light switches have been arranged so that lights may be turned out without shutting off power to elevators, refrigerators, etc., and important lights may be switched to battery power if outside power fails. If the batteries fail an auxiliary power plant, Diesel operated, is available within the hospital.

Cheerful Curtains.
Waiting rooms where families of patients sit also will be blacked out with heavy curtains. These, though, won't be gloomy solid black. They will be in figured patterns, dark, but not uncheerful.

Emory will make its blackout precautions a part of every night's routine. The curtains will be drawn, the shades lowered, so that all that needs to be done in case of an alarm is to turn off the lights in the patients' rooms. There will be no frantic scampering about to draw curtains and pull down shades.

Example of blackout precautions taken by a big downtown office building may be found in the Citizens and Southern Bank. All tenants who use their offices at night have been instructed to turn

At Federal Offices

Lieutenant Claude Gozer, former assistant probation officer for the northern district of Georgia, visited friends in the post office yesterday. He is on leave from duties with Army intelligence.

Miss Nora Terrell, secretary to Assistant United States Attorney Raymond W. Martin, has been confined to her home due to illness, but is expected to return to work today.

Jack Tolbert, information man for the state NYA offices, left yesterday for a tour of south Georgia, where he will address various civic groups on the work of the NYA in national defense.

out their lights at the first sound of the warning siren and come to the second floor hallway, where no lights are visible from outside. There they may stay, in comfortable chairs, for the duration of the alarm.

Only other lights will be on floors where the cleaning crew is at work. Cleaners have been instructed to immediately turn out all lights, go to the elevator, and be taken to the basement. The night superintendent of the building personnel will go to the roof as fire watchers. There long-handled shovels, big boxes of sand, and small spray pumps have been placed.

All over town individuals and firms are preparing for the first test blackout—and for the real blackouts that may come after. Yet if one person fails—if one light is left burning—if one all that others have done to blackout their own homes and buildings is worthless.

Linda Leaves Prairievale; Goes to Diane in Chicago

SYNOPSIS. Linda Phillips, an attractive stenographer in Prairievale, has been engaged to Kyle Norman for four years. His apparent inability to hold down a job has postponed their marriage several times. He becomes nettled when he hears that Diane Frazier, a fashion artist, has invited her and Sally Barnes, a friend of school days, to spend the week-end with her in Chicago so they can attend the wedding of Linda's cousin, Betty Allison. Linda hesitates, but after she learns that Kyle has lost his job, she goes to Chicago with Sally. At a cocktail party prior to the wedding Linda meets Greg Hollister, a chemical engineer. They are attracted to each other instantly. Linda is thrilled. Kyle now seems like a shadowy figure in a dim past. Soon after she returns home she gets a letter from Greg, saying he will visit her. Kyle becomes angry, then says he will step out on her. Linda clings to him, declaring, "I do love you." Sally and her husband, Hugh, a banker, give a dinner party for Linda and Greg. Linda has a glorious time, but to her disappointment Greg reminds her, "You are engaged to another man." Linda does not tell Greg she has decided to break her engagement, but she feels, does not know what to do.

INSTALLMENT XXI. "I can't stand it any longer," she said, in tears one evening, when she had fled to Sally for sympathy and understanding. "Linda, this may hurt," Sally said, taking a long breath, "but it's true, and you've got to face facts. The people you're condemning as busybodies aren't like that at all. They are your friends. They've known you always, and they want to make sure you don't make a mistake that you may regret later."

"But it's my life," she replied. "Yes, it is your life, but everyone of these so-called busybodies has had a hand in it at one time or another. Why, I'll wager your hope chest is filled with gifts from these very people."

Linda remembered the big chest in her bedroom, filled to overflowing with gifts from friends and chums—gifts to Linda and Kyle. "It isn't that we don't like Greg," Sally assured her, "but you're so innocent, Linda. You have no idea what life is like outside of Prairievale, and we don't want you to be disillusioned. Try to be brave, Linda, and you can lick this thing if you want to."

Linda smiled through her tears. "I'll try," she promised, "but, oh, Sally, I don't know how much longer I can bear it!" Despite her resolution, Linda's patience was short-lived. Nearly a week had elapsed since Greg's visit and she had heard nothing from him. This coupled with her parents' continuous remonstrances, caused Linda to break down. "I can't stand this any longer," she sobbed. "I've got to decide things for myself. I'm not a child any more. You must understand that!"

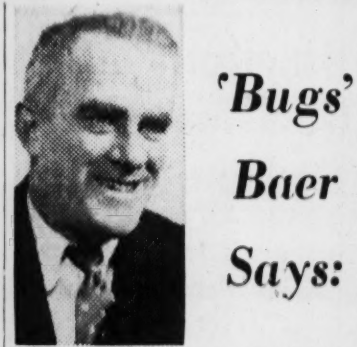

"I can understand only one thing," her father returned stubbornly, "and that is this: You're making a foolish mistake, casting aside the love of a good man for someone you know nothing about, and mark my words, you'll be sorry."

"I think Kyle means more to you than I do," she whispered. "Kyle has been like a son to us," he returned stiffly. "A good son."

"And I'm not a good daughter!" Linda was thoroughly aroused. "Is that what you mean?"

"A good daughter would have more consideration for her parents' wishes," Linda flung the word angrily, her face losing color, her eyes flashing. "What of me? What of the life I want for myself? I've asked very little, after all, except kindness and . . . and patience."

"We've been too patient," her father said harshly. "That man should never have been allowed inside this house, and by heaven, he never will be again!"

'Bugs' Baer Says:

I see that it takes Winston Churchill two minutes to get into his zipper outfit. That's with his cigar in his mouth.

Winston is a bit wide across the narrows and is not built for speed. I can get into a zipper outfit in 10 seconds and get under table with cafe society in five more.

Maybe Winston has an old-fashioned armored Mother Hubbard that zips up the back. He calls his a siren trossau but I've seen his pictures and he is wrong. He is not even fascinating.

There are no coat and vest with the outfit. It's one piece. Boy, this is such a tough war you have to wear overalls just to get frightened in.

Miss Linda. Come in, chile. Miss Diane ain't said nothin' about your coming."

"She didn't know," Linda admitted. "I—I wanted it to be a surprise, Louise."

The maid glanced at a wall clock and said shrewdly, "Then you're going to surprise her before long, 'cause she'll be home in about an hour."

"Is it that late?" Linda asked anxiously. "Good heavens, I've got so many things to do!"

While Louise took her things to the guest room, Linda sought the seclusion of Diane's bedroom. She looked up the number of Greg's laboratory in the thick telephone book, and with trembling fingers dialed.

When a man's voice announced that Greg had gone for the day, Linda hung up in disappointment, after leaving her name and address in the hope that Greg might return to his office.

She had no idea how to reach his apartment, and at last decided to ask Diane when the artist reached home. She amused herself by dwelling on what she would say to Greg. Should she tell him the truth, all at once, or be coy in explaining why she had come to Chicago, in order to keep him guessing for awhile? The latter idea was abandoned. Linda was sure that Greg would want all the details immediately. He was, she knew, far too honest, too loyal for sham and pretense.

Hadn't he said that her engagement to Kyle made things awkward? Now that she had severed all connections with her former life, it was becoming increasingly difficult for Linda to realize that she had ever fancied herself in love with Kyle Norman. Even his face seemed vague in her memory, and she was slowly forgetting her bitterness toward her parents.

Continued Tomorrow.

AUNT HET
By ROBERT QUILLEN

Still she was becoming uneasy over her unexpected arrival. Perhaps Diane would be gone. Perhaps she would have other guests—other plans. What would the artist think when Linda's battered trunk appeared at her door? Linda had not even considered such a possibility! Then, remembering Diane's gracious invitation, Linda was comforted. It was too late, now for anxiety. She hailed a cab, and with a little thrill of pleasure, gave Diane's address.

Fibber McGee Keeps

His Holiday Spirit

Although life has returned to normal in Wistful Vista after a hectic holiday season, Fibber McGee is unable to put the brakes on his exuberance. It will take the combined efforts of Molly, the Old Timer and Mrs. Abigail Uppington to disentangle the McGee affairs during Fibber's weekly outburst tonight at 9:30 o'clock over WSB.

Jim Jordan, Fibber's creator, is busy starting another year of civic duties as president of the Encino, Cal., Chamber of Commerce, and Fibber is planning to follow suit with Wistful Vista.

Cugat Band Lists

'Choo Choo' Tune

Given a greeting of subzero weather in Chicago, "Xavier Cugat's Revue" will feature Margo and emcee Bert Parks in a vocal duet of "Button Up Your Overcoat" when it takes to the air tonight at 8 o'clock over WAGA.

Longing for warmer climes, and heartened by innumerable requests from listeners for a repetition of her version of "Chattanooga Choo Choo," Margo will sing her song of a train that is steam-heated, not to Chattanooga, but to Cuba.

Once in the land of castanets and conga drums, the Cugat crew will crash into the "chicken" conga "Kee Kee Kee Kee" and Miguelito Valdes will solo in "Brucia Manigua."

Carmen Castillo's love will be "Mammitas" which will round out a program of typical Latin tunes to temper the frigidty of the Chicago weather.

Kate Smith's "Variety Show" will make two complete round trips from New York city to Hollywood during the broadcast next Friday.

Kate will introduce Ingrid Bergman in New York, then Orson Welles will be heard from Hollywood, next the program will travel back to New York for Lou Holtz, then return to the Pacific coast for Olivia De Havilland, and finally back to New York for the sign-off.

Dishpan Debate Due

On Quiz Show Today

Four old-fashioned housewives and four men who believe that housework should be mechanized will take their stands on opposite sides of the dishpan during the Battle of the Sexes tonight at 9 o'clock over WSB.

The men are employees of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, who have declared themselves in favor of a robot (Webster: An automaton that performs all hard work) world. Three of the housewives who match wits with these new-fangled experts are grandmothers, Julia Sanderson and Frank Crum-it will try to be impartial judges.

Jack Benny is working on plans to move his entire program to New York, around the end of January, for a fortnight in the metropolis. The comedian wants to attend some of the hit stage shows that have opened since his last visit in October.

Louis Van Rooten, of "Joyce Jordan-Girl Interme," recalls an experience with Jack Lukas at a recent benefit broadcast before which Lukas, with his decided Hungarian accent, casually stated that he thought the whole cast should speak with their "usual American voices" and avoid any dialogues!

Kate Smith will make a further appeal for books on her midday program, January 12, as Radio Director of the Victory Campaign Committee to raise 10,000,000 books for service men. Kate recently accepted the original painting for the campaign poster on behalf of her committee.

Man, Wife, Young Daughter Tied to Bed Posts by Robbers

Gang of Men and Women Unsuccessful in Plan To Rob Narcotics Vaults of Western Drug Company.

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 12.—(AP)—An attempted robbery in which a gang of men and women tied a father, his wife and one of their two young daughters to their bedposts was reported today by Tacoma police.

The gang, believed by police to be the same band which robbed the Tacoma Drug Company of several thousand dollars worth of narcotics last July, twice failed in efforts to obtain supplies from the company vault over the weekend, officers said.

This account was given by police. Virgil Berry, bookkeeper of the firm, his wife and an 8-year-old daughter were tied to bedposts in their home Sunday morning while the intruders tried out the front door key and safe combination which they forced Berry to give them.

The gang fled after accidentally setting off a burglar alarm. Last night the gang hired a room in a hotel next door to the drug firm and dug a hole through a 13-inch fire wall. That attempt failed, too, because the vault combination had been changed.

Police said that while the family lay tied to the bedposts, a woman member of the gang said the two small girls would be harmed if the combination proved wrong.

C. F. Osmers, president of the drug firm, directed the following message to the gang through newspapers:

"I want the criminals responsible for this crime to know that Mr. Berry gave them the right key and the right combination. He could not do otherwise under the circumstances. It was I who made the change after the Berrys managed to release themselves and called me. I do not want any harm to come to the Berry family."

No Early End To Jap Clash, Knox Asserts

Says Battle of Atlantic Still Most Important Struggle.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Secretary of the Navy Knox said today that while the American fleet was not idle no early conclusive showdown could be expected with the Japanese fleet and that the battle of the Atlantic was still the war's most important struggle.

The Navy's number one job, he said, in a speech prepared for the annual United States conference of mayors, is keeping the sea lanes open between America and Britain to bring about the defeat of Hitler's Germany—"our great enemy."

"I would not be frank with you if I led you to believe that you could expect favorable, dramatic developments of triumphant American, full-scale naval engagements in the Pacific in the near future," Knox said.

Pointing out that Germany, by bringing Japan into the war sought to divert the attention of America and Britain from the Atlantic, Secretary Knox told the mayors:

"It might easily have led to action out of the excess of righteous anger, but the cool-headed leadership provided by our commander-in-chief, the President, kept us safe from that danger. Under Roosevelt, we have kept our heads and we will make our own plans in our own way and we will strike where and when we are ready, not before."

Variety Club Votes $30,000 For Playground

Work To Begin Immediately on Center for Underprivileged.

A $30,000 playground development for underprivileged boys and girls, covering an entire city block on Bankhead avenue, was voted by the Atlanta Variety Club yesterday.

Harry Ballance, who took over the reins of the club as chief barker yesterday, proposed the development and received the unanimous approval of the club to begin the playground and recreation center immediately.

Options are held by Ballance for the club on the square block in a section where juvenile delinquency records show organized playground facilities are badly needed. The new chief barker explained, the 55 members present at the luncheon in the clubrooms yesterday were "sold" on the chief barker's proposal and voted full authority to the board of directors to complete the land purchase and begin the necessary grading and construction at once.

The Atlanta Variety Club is two and a half years old and is an organization of showmen dedicated to children's charities. The club has approximately $32,000 earmarked for charity at this time.

The club voted resolutions thanking William K. Jenkins, retiring chief barker, for his work in establishing the Variety Club in Atlanta. Other officers sworn in were E. E. Whitaker, as first assistant chief barker; Willie Davis, second assistant; Paul Wilson, property man; R. B. Wilby, dough guy; Jimmy Harrison, Jeff Davis, Dick Ford, Dave Prince, directors.

Coates Is Denied Habeas Corpus

Charles Coates, convicted slayer of Clark J. Jr., of the State Highway Patrol, lost another battle in his effort to evade the electric chair yesterday when the Georgia supreme court denied his plea for a writ of habeas corpus.

Just before he was scheduled to die last September, Coates' attorneys filed habeas corpus action against Warden R. H. Lawrence, of Tattall prison, and Deputy Warden W. B. Pippin.

Judge M. W. Eason, of the city court of Reidsville, turned down this last-minute plea and his decision was upheld by the supreme court. Previously the supreme court had upheld Coates' conviction.

Glynn Commissioners Rename Gould Chairman

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. BRUNSWICK, Ga., Jan. 12.—R. A. Gould was re-elected chairman and Harold J. Friedman was again named county engineer-director at a meeting of the Glynn county commissioners. Both officers have served the county for a number of years.

The board authorized the appropriation of a year's salary to the families of County Police Officers Anton Krauss and J. C. Coleman, who lost their lives in a gun battle December 17 in the discharge of their duties. Officer Krauss died instantly and Officer Coleman dying a few days afterwards in the local hospital.

The officers were killed at a gun battle at a near-by roadhouse. The board appropriated the year's salary, minus the sum for funeral, hospital and doctors' bills.

The county commissioners also passed an ordinance making rules and regulations of blackouts in the county compulsory.

Prompt action is necessary in replying to the attractive offers in the Want Ad section of The Constitution.

Girl Musicians Replacing Men In Name Bands

Miss Lois Ashford Joins Ken Harris Orchestra as Trumpeter.

With Uncle Sam reaching into the ranks of the name bands and picking up a trumpeter here, a saxophonist there, and a piano player hither and yon, the orchestra leaders of late have been hard put to find the man who can blow sweet and hot at the wiggle of a baton.

In fact, Ken Harris, playing out at the Biltmore, didn't try to find a man. He had a better idea. He sent to New York and got tall, blue-eyed and willowy Lois Ashford to play the trumpet and double in violin and Uncle Sam didn't hurt the Harris orchestra at all.

Miss Ashford, who comes from a family of musicians, asks no odds of any gent when it comes to the trumpet and the violin, a very difficult combination to find, and one which cannot be picked up on any street corner.

Nor does sitting down to hit a few hot licks surrounded by the opposite sex perturb her in the least. She played the piano for Nelson for quite a spell and working in a man's band is an old and familiar story to her.

Patrons of the Biltmore will be able to hear Miss Ashford give out on the trumpet for the first time tonight, when she takes her place with Ken's boys in the Empire Room.

How Red Cross Made Another Soldier Happy

Private Ed Gilbert Made To Feel Life Worth Living After All.

This is the fifth of a series of articles in which soldiers in Lawson General Hospital tell, in their own words, what the Red Cross has done for them.

By HAROLD MARTIN. On the eighth day of a 10-day maneuver in Louisiana Private First Class Ed Gilbert, so tired he was beginning to stagger, lay down in the back of a truck to catch a little shuteye.

The truck was in motion, over rough roads, and Private Gilbert had deposited his frame upon a downy couch made up of tent poles. Private Gilbert slept soundly for the better part of two hours, and awoke refreshed from the waist up. From the waist down he was paralyzed.

Thinking that his nether extremities had merely "gone to sleep" Private Gilbert raised no outcry for the better part of 15 minutes. Then he began to wonder if all was well.

Crushed Cartilage. All was not well. Two weeks later, after Private Gilbert had been punched and prodded by a number of doctors, they found out that during his long snooze on the stack of tent poles in the bouncing truck he had crushed the cartilage between his fifth, sixth and 12th vertebrae.

Which brings Private Gilbert to Lawson General Hospital a very unhappy man. In no time, of course, he was back on his feet and walking around again. But of cash money he had none. Of razor blades he was without. Of tooth paste he was void, of shaving cream he was defunct.

Private Gilbert, depressed by it all, finally wandered into the Red Cross office, looking woeful.

Red Cross Helped. They sent Private Gilbert back beaming broadly. They told him how to go about tracing his service record, so he could get his pay. They handed him a "comfort kit" with all the things he needed for shaving and whatnot. They hung a stocking on his bed at Christmas. They saw to it he had cigarettes and stamps and envelopes. He had been so broke he couldn't write his girl and she was getting

Morgenthau Denies Rumor U. S. Will Confiscate Savings

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., denied today that the government had any plan or intention of confiscating savings deposits.

He gave reporters a statement saying: "In view of recurring rumors that the government is planning to confiscate savings accounts, Secretary Morgenthau today entered an emphatic denial that this was so."

"I wish to state most emphatically that there are no foundations whatsoever for such rumors," Mr. Morgenthau said.

"The federal government does not have under consideration any proposal regarding the confiscation of savings deposits of this country for any purpose."

"Furthermore," he added, "Any one circulating rumors of this character is acting against the welfare of the nation."

She thought he was forgetting her. While the doctors were working on Private Gilbert's crushed cartilage the Red Cross worked on his crushed spirit. Now he's feeling fine, physically, and in his mind.

"They can have as big a chunk as they want out of my pay, when it comes," said Private Gilbert the other day. "They've done plenty for me."

Nor is Private Gilbert a rare case. He's just one among thousands the Red Cross has helped, in one way or another, as they go about their job of being the friendly, understanding agency to which a soldier can turn when he needs something and needs it badly.

As a consequence, they need funds and need them badly. So help all you can when your time comes to contribute to the Red Cross war fund drive.

Miss Huston Marries Eugene R. Booth.

The marriage of Miss Mary Madeleine Huston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen F. Huston, of Albany, Ga., to Eugene Rodney Booth, of Winston-Salem, N. C., formerly of Atlanta, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Booth, was solemnized on December 27 at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alva D. Kiser on Virginia circle. Dr. Leroy G. Henderson, of the First Presbyterian church of Albany, officiated. Music was presented by Mrs. Rosina Zahn, pianist; Miss Blanche Albert, vocalist, and Mrs. F. W. Albert, violinist.

The couple took their vows before an altar formed of ferns and ivy centered with white roses. Floor baskets were filled with ferns and white roses, and candelabras held white burning tapers. The ribbon bearers were Misses Kay Huston, niece of the bride, and Ann Frew, cousin of the groom, who wore petal pink net dresses.

The matron of honor, Mrs. F. Hillis Bishop, wore a powder blue tulle gown. Her head dress was a tiara of flowers, and she carried an old-fashioned nosegay of pastel sweet peas and blue delphinium.

The bride entered with her father, by whom she was given in marriage. The groom had for his best man Eldridge Powell.

The bride was stunning in her wedding gown of blush-tinted satin, featuring a close-fitting bodice made with sweetheart neckline, long pointed sleeves, and a full skirt ending in a short train. She wore a fingertip tulle veil and her only ornament was a strand of pearls, the gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of pastel sweet peas and swainsonia centered with purple orchids.

The bride's mother was gowned in black velvet and wore gardenias on her shoulder. The groom's mother wore a gown of aquamarine lace posed over tulle, and a shoulder spray of gladioli and valley lilies.

Miss Edna Lindsey kept the bride's book. Assisting in entertaining were Mesdames Ellis Terry, C. J. Sheehan, Alexander Dahl and Gilmer Richards. Misses Ruth Suttles and Gene Waller presided at the punch bowl.

The three-tiered wedding cake adorned the bride's table, and the cake was encircled with white narcissi and ferns. White tapers glowed in silver candelabras.

The bride's traveling costume was a lightweight wool seafame green ensemble, trimmed in mink, worn with small mink hat and muff, and brown accessories. She wore orchids on her shoulder.

Mr. and Mrs. Booth left for a wedding trip to Miami and other points in Florida, after which they will reside in Winston-Salem, N. C., where Mr. Booth is in business.

A Hot Meat Sandwich Hits the Spot

By Sally Saver.

Hot sandwiches hit the spot when folks come in out of the cold, tingling and hungry. Too, they're life savers, for the house-keeper's time is precious these busy days. A filling of barbecued ground steak will be enthusiastically received, especially if served on toasted buns or rye toast. Hot sandwiches are a specially good luncheon idea, fine for after school or late supper snacks. Make the sandwiches pictured this way:

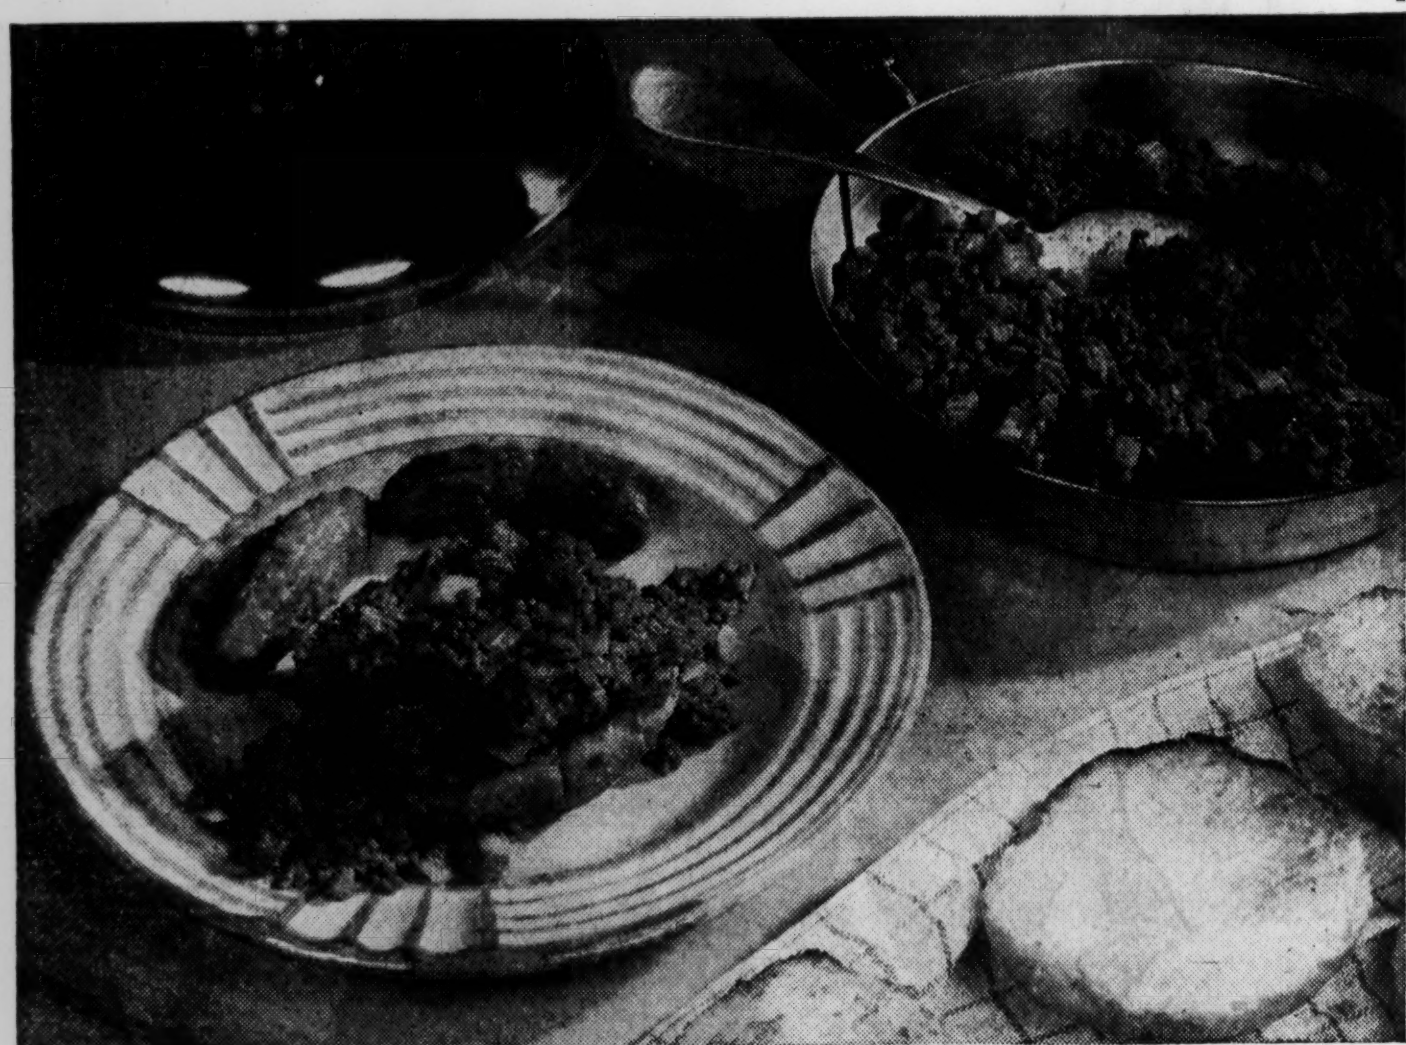

Barbecued Ground Steak Sandwiches.

To serve 4 to 6: Brown 1 pound ground steak in fat in a skillet. Add 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, 1-2 cup tomato catsup, 2 teaspoons cider vinegar and 1-2 cup chopped celery. Mix, then cook slowly with pan covered, until flavors are thoroughly blended, about 12 minutes. Serve very hot on toasted buns or rye toast. Pickles make an excellent edible garnish.

Tuna Sandwich Au Gratin.

Drain 1 small can tuna, flake and mix with 2 tablespoons mayonnaise. Season with a dash of pepper. Toast 4 slices bread and spread with tuna mixture. Make a sauce with 2 cups cream of mushroom sauce and 3 tablespoons flour, blended with 2 tablespoons butter. Cook sauce until thickened, then add 1 hard-boiled egg, chopped, to the sauce. Place tuna-spread sandwiches in shallow pan, cover with sauce and top each with a slice of American cheese. Place in oven or under broiler long enough to melt cheese and heat sandwiches thoroughly. With a salad and a drink this is a complete simple meal.

Questions about foods, recipes, cooking and serving will be answered by Sally Saver. Write or phone The Constitution or WA. 6565.

These sandwiches will find a welcome on a cold day.

Movie Will Give a Swing Version Of Defense Workers on Late Shift

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 12.—(INS)—There are three kids in Hollywood—Sol and Den Barzman and Bess Tassel, who are going great guns as writers. They wrote parts of "Meet the People," they authored "True to Life" for Paramount and a play called "Labor Pains." Now they have sold Samuel Goldwyn a movie story called "Swing Shift." Their story is based on the defense workers whose shift is from four in the afternoon to midnight. All young people, they have no recreation, so they have formed a defense workers' club which carries on from midnight.

It is Mr. G.'s purpose to make this a 100 per cent young picture. He'll cast Dana Andrews, Virginia Gilmore, Bettye Avery and Dan Duryea and he'll line up a group of young newcomers. The movie is not just a dream. It goes into production very soon.

A Weak Solution of Iodine Holds Little Danger as Poison

By Dr. William Brady.

The official tincture of iodine which was in general use in the United States and Canada a few years ago contained 7 1/2 per cent of iodine. Since 1922 a weaker preparation, called mild tincture of iodine in the United States and weak solution of iodine in Canada, has been generally sold when the public asks for tincture of iodine or just iodine. This mild tincture or weak solution of iodine is the most satisfactory preparation for first aid disinfection of minor wounds or for any other purpose for which iodine may be used in the home.

In some states the law requires that a poison label be applied to tincture of iodine, the familiar skull and crossbones. Whether this is required for solution of iodine in Canada, I do not know.

Other states require no such poison label on tincture of iodine sold to the public.

Although the older textbooks assert that tincture of iodine is poisonous if taken in considerable quantity, by mistake or with felonious intent, reports of serious or fatal poisoning by iodine are extraordinarily rare in medical and medicolegal records.

Numerous far more dangerous poisons are indiscriminately sold to the public without a poison label or even a hint on the label about the possible danger—for instance, preparations containing strychnine, acetanilide, etc. Numerous instances of fatal poisoning of children by strychnine in "candy" tablets distributed as samples have been reported in medical literature. Still, no one has agitated seriously for legal restrictions or precautions against such tragedies.

The United States pharmacopoeia is about to be revised—the regular decennial revision. It is to be hoped that the revision committee and their medical, pharmacological and chemical associates and advisers will see the light and make the weak solution of iodine now used in Canada official in the United States, in place of mild tincture of iodine, and at the same time issue some official statement as to the innocuous character of weak solution of iodine, which will bring an end to the wretched trick by which the druggists frighten people off from using iodine as everybody should use it—and also destroy the caution value of the skull and crossbones label.

Excellent authorities, after thorough experimental investigation, propose this formula for "mild solution of iodine"—

Iodine 2 grams

Sodium iodide 2.36 grams

Distilled water 100.00 cc.

MY DAY: Education Is Wasted On Empty Stomachs

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

NEW YORK CITY, Sunday.—Yesterday morning, at the Office of Civilian Defense, I met with some 25 people who are working largely in the mountain areas for the Save-the-Children Fund. They work, as far as possible, with the existing agencies, and one of their main activities is to salvage desks from schools that are being remodeled and to provide them for the smaller schools where no desks have been available in the past.

In addition, they provide shoes and clothing for children who would otherwise be out of school. They have managed to have a demonstration project in one of the mountain areas. There, usually in the month of January, the second teacher would nearly always have to resign because not enough children were left in the school to employ two teachers.

By providing suitable shoes and clothing, the children were able to continue coming to school. By helping to provide hot lunches, they have managed to keep that school so well filled with pupils that three teachers have to be employed during most of the school year.

I think it is rarely understood in many parts of our country that great numbers of children drop out of school because of lack of proper clothing. We take it for granted that, if we provide schools, we have done all that needs to be done. I have always been in favor of federal aid to education by grants to states which do not have the ability to provide equal opportunities for every child to obtain an education.

I have never been able to separate, however, in my mind, academic education from the health of the child. This can only be good when a child is properly nourished and has adequate medical care. In one mountain county, I am told that 70 per cent of the boys were rejected in the draft because of malnutrition. Providing adequate schools would not meet this question of building an adequate citizen to meet the needs of the community when he reaches the age of 21.

Our interpretation of education must never be so narrow that we lose sight of the fact that learning to read on an empty stomach, or with eyes that are overstrained because of lack of proper eyeglasses, is not real education. Under such circumstances, one cannot learn much and one forgets the little one learns almost immediately, because one stops reading as soon as there is no obligation to do so.

After this group of social workers left, I spent two hours with Administrator McNutt and the director of the Bureau of the Budget, Mr. Harold D. Smith, and various other officials. I returned to the White House just in time for lunch.

I came to New York City last night and I am having a rather lazy day visiting some of the older members of my family, whom I have not seen for some time. After my usual Sunday night broadcast, I am going to speak at a meeting this evening.

Simple Rules Can Develop The Knack of Letter Writing

If letter-writing leaves you with hair and mind on end, remember this! Good letters can be written easily, are written every day by people not as bright as you.

For instance, those thank-you letters that bog down after the first sentence! You'd find plenty to say if you knew this little trick. Tell the giver how you felt when you opened the present. Don't you like to see your presents opened? Well, everyone does.

"Your package looked so exciting. I was all thumbs unwrapping it—and I squealed when I saw the lovely pin."

Or perhaps your Waterloo is writing invitations! Just be clear about the date and hour, spelling out the numbers as good form demands. "I'm giving a luncheon-bridge on Monday, February second, at one-thirty. I hope you can come!"

A letter of congratulation? Be sincere and simple: "I hope you'll have years of happiness."

Naturally you want to put up a good appearance, too. Monogrammed paper is considered best for very formal notes. Is it all right to type letters? Yes, some of them.

Find the answers to your letter-writing problems in our 40-page booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Gives dozens of sample business and social letters; tells correct form, errors to avoid, how to make your letters more charming.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS," to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Today's Charm Tip

Their "dates" will forgive a number of things in girl-behavior but NEVER an aloof, bored attitude.

The peasant dress holds its own. It's still the most popular style for casual clothes. For practically any informal occasion, Anne Shirley gets out her newest peasant frock, a two-piece ensemble of wool jersey.

Forget Your Worry About Mixing Food

By Ida Jean Kain.

If you have it fixed in your mind that certain foods—fish and milk, or milk and orange juice, or protein and starch—do not mix well, try this luncheon: Have your favorite fish, creamed if you like, a chopped green salad, whole wheat bread, butter, a glass of milk, and for dessert slice up a nice, juicy orange. That menu mixes milk, fish, oranges and protein, starch and fats. It is a well-balanced lunch. You will feel fine after you have eaten it.

I don't know how many food fads started, but they surely have stuck. In spite of the national nutrition program, a good many of these notions live on. Besides the one that certain foods won't combine, there is one that meat is injurious to the kidneys; that white meat is less harmful than red, and such old-fashioned ideas that cheese is "binding," and that eggs are toxic.

Any wholesome food combines well with any other wholesome food. You can make a delicious flip with half orange juice and half milk. And there's nothing wrong with a scalloped fish dish in which milk is used.

The reason it is so important to toss out these food notions is this: They often lead to a deficiency diet. There are people who take first one thing and then another out of the menu in the belief that certain foods do not mix well, or that these foods do not agree with them. Finally, they discard so many good and necessary foods that they wind up on a deficiency diet and their symptoms of indigestion, acidosis, aches and ills are actually caused by the absence of the needed protective elements.

There are people, however, who cannot tolerate certain foods—milk, eggs, wheat, shell fish and strawberries being the commonest. But that is an allergy, not a notion. In that case, ascertain the offending foods and leave them out of your menus. But guard against narrowing below the point which affords protection, the list of foods you can eat. You need all the protective elements and must get them in some form.

Security for Glamor Makes a Bad Swap

Dear Dixie:

By Dixie George.

I am at the end of my rope. I am 21 years old and have been married for four years. My husband has been good to me. He works hard to give me the things I want. He is from a good family and the only trouble with him is that he drinks. I have begged him to stop, and he worries me very much. Although he does not go out and run around when he drinks, he just stays at home and is never mean to me. I have everything I could ask for in a husband. But I am not sure I love him. You see I recently met a man with whom I feel desperately in love. He has given me no reason to love him at all. I only see him once in awhile. His work brought me in contact with him. I have tried to think I was silly in thinking I loved him. That was about six months ago. I think of him every minute of the day. I go to sleep thinking of him. I get up and begin my day thinking of him. I have tried to forget him, and even went away for a while, but I think even much more of him. I know I could never hope for his love. He is just one step ahead of me in the world. Sometimes I feel as if I married before I had my fling.

PINKY.

There are a great many things worse than a drinking husband, and yours seems rather harmless. Since he takes good care of you I think you are very fortunate, and even though you may not have had your so-called fling before you married, I think you are flitting with danger now if you begin going with this other man. You say you only see him once in awhile. That is a very slim basis for falling in love. Just because he looks fascinating, or appears to be someone who will be perfect in every way, you have fallen in love with him. This is a very foolish action. Appearances are not everything, and this goes for people in love as well as others. If this fact does not make you realize that you are not being fair to your husband, perhaps the fact that this man has not appeared in the least interested in you, should make some impression. What benefit are you getting by being so wild about this man? You are making yourself miserable, and unhappy, and certainly are not making a happy home for your husband. You know that you would rather be dead than hurt your husband. There would be some excuse for you to want to leave him, if he were mean to you or did not support you. On the other hand, you are on the verge of casting away something stable and dependable for something of which you know nothing.

GIRL MUST BE CAREFUL NOT TO PURSUE

Dear Dixie: I am 18 and in love with a boy 18. He dated me for about three months and told me he loved me. Now he has started dating my girl friend and tells her he thinks lots of me and that I am a nice girl. He acts as if he still likes me, but not enough to go with me. I love him and I know he does not care for me, as he has told me. He broke almost every date he made with me and when he did come, my girl friend he never failed to arrive. Would it be all right to give a party and invite him as my escort? Will you help me to win him back, as I love him more every time I see him.

I would not invite him to the party as my escort if I were you. I think he has shown very plainly that he does not care to be with you, and if you invite him to be your date, it would be a great deal of him and that is why he treats you as he does. Do not let him know that you are so wild about him. Your only chance to impress him again, is to be as active as possible and to try to be with him as often as possible. This would be easy, for since he goes with your best friend it would be a simple matter to arrange four-somes for bridge parties. If he is in your company for a number of times and does not show any inclination to come back to see you, or does not ask you for a date, you better forget him and get yourself another beau.

MILK Gets NEW Taste Appeal for Babies

Mother's find that one of the best ways to give baby all the milk he needs is to make some of it each day into tempting rennet-custards for a number of times and does not show any inclination to come back to see you, or does not ask you for a date, you better forget him and get yourself another beau.

You can make these eggless, non-cooked custards in a minute with "Junket" Rennet Tablets—unsweetened, add sugar and flavor to taste. The rennet enzyme makes them digest more readily than plain milk. Widely recommended by doctors for babies and children. At your grocer's and druggist's.

Older children enjoy the flavors and colors of rennet-custards made with "Junket" Rennet Powder. Easier and quicker. At grocer's.

Atlantan Haunts Ship Docks To Await Daughter's Arrival

By SALLY FORTH.

• • • SINCE SUNDAY Mrs. Samuel E. McConnell has been keeping vigil at the New Orleans docks, patiently waiting for the boat which has her daughter, Betty McConnell Woodward, as a passenger. Betty's husband, Lieutenant Walden Woodward, is stationed in the Panama Canal Zone, you know, and she is being sent home for the duration.

Betty telephoned her mother the other day to let her know that she will arrive this week. Strict censorship, however, kept her from revealing the name of the boat or the day of arrival.

So in order to assure a proper welcome for her daughter, Mrs. McConnell decided that there was only one thing to do—to haunt the New Orleans docks every day!

Betty has in her charge young James H. Reeves III, grandson of General James H. Reeves, Atlanta Red Cross director, and Mrs. Reeves. Little Jimmy is the son of Captain and Mrs. James H. Reeves Jr., who also are stationed in the Canal Zone, and will remain with his grandparents for the duration.

Arriving on the same boat with Betty will be Mrs. John Vail, who will visit her here for several days. According to Mrs. McConnell, Mrs. Vail is most attractive, possessing both charm and good looks.

Mrs. McConnell has been having an exciting time lately. She was in Panama when the war broke out, a subject which she dismisses with the snap of a finger. In fact, the only comment she made to Sally FORTH was that 10 days later she found herself discarding summer clothes for a fur coat and was on her way to Petersburg, Va., to visit her son, Lieutenant Wellington McConnell, who is stationed at Camp Lee.

But she did reveal an interesting sidelight on Betty's life in the Canal Zone. It seems that the Woodward's favorite newspaper is The Atlanta Constitution, and they have subscribed to the Sunday edition ever since they have been there.

Even though distance causes the paper to arrive 10 days after its publication, its news is still NEWS to the absentees, who read it from cover to cover with avid interest. And the day of its arrival means that the Woodward household sits down to luncheon an hour or so later, than usual!

There are a number of Atlantans and Georgians stationed at the same post, consequently "Constitution day" means a gathering for tea at the Woodward quarters, the guests entertaining themselves with their favorite section of the paper!

According to Mrs. McConnell, the arrival of The Constitution is the high peak of the week and causes as much excitement and interest as a "round-robin" letter from home!

Preparedness means victory and the Red Cross trains to insure preparedness. Give to the Red Cross today.

• • • BREAKFAST in Havana, luncheon in Miami, and on to Atlanta the same day! Such was the airplane record established by Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Paulin when they returned from Cuba. They went to Havana to attend the meeting of the Carlos Finlay Medical Research Body. Dr. Paulin was named chairman of the scientific advisory committee for the United States. He received the medal denoting the highest scientific decoration which Cuba awards a physician, and was the only one in the south attending the session.

Luncheon at Havana's glorified Yacht Club, dinners on palatial yachts in the harbor, and ceremonies in the President's palace, with Batista, the President, bestowing the medals on the seven physicians receiving the decorations, were highlights of Dr. and Mrs. Paulin's visit. Orchids galore were sent Mrs. Paulin during her stay in Havana, and she never left the National hotel without clusters of these exotic flowers adorning her shoulder.

A porcelain container in the shape of a "V" for victory, and filled with red carnations and blue flowers, beautified the center of the luncheon table at the Yacht Club. Red, white and blue ribbon streamers radiated from the centerpiece to the miniature United States and Cuban flags, which denoted the friendly feeling existing between the two countries.

Have you bought your ticket for the judging school to be sponsored next month by the Atlanta Flower Show Association? Get them through the ticket chairman, Mrs. Willard McBurney, at the Garden Center at Rich's or the Garden Service at Davidson's. The president, Mrs. Davis Webster, announces that the proceeds will be given to the Red Cross.

Crack Jacket Team There is every indication that Roy Mundorff has come up with another of those good Georgia Tech basketball teams. The Jackets have the poise that is associated with a veteran cast.

The manner in which the team has started the season indicates an ability to make a strong showing in any company, and there will be an opportunity for followers to tell more about this on Thursday and Saturday of this week.

Hank Crisp's Alabama team, always a potent contender for conference honors, plays in the school gymnasium Thursday, while the Vanderbilt Commodores are scheduled for Saturday night.

It's to be a big week in basketball, with the Original Celtics and Police Crackers heading the colorful program Wednesday night at the city auditorium.

The new wooden floor at the auditorium promises a return of the good old days in basketball hereabouts. There may be a chance for the conference tournaments to be held here again. They used to be financial successes.

At any rate, it provides a swell setting for another clash between the world champs and a team coached by Shep Lauder. One of Shep's teams beat the Celtics a few years back. Few teams do.

It's Coming Home War's going to bring home, in a big way to a lot of hunters and fishermen, problems which have existed for a good many years.

I speak of the hunters and fishermen who have had a cursory interest only because they could crank up Lizzie and do their fishing and hunting in adjacent states. War may change all this, just as it may change a lot of other pursuits as of normal times.

Conservation of auto tires will cut down on so much commuting on hunts, chances are, and then the home state problem is going to be driven home. The sportsmen who previously have not been concerned with the problems of the stay-at-homes are going to decay pollution of streams and the scarcity of good places in which to hunt.

Between pollution in streams and posted preserves ordinary and even not so ordinary, sportsmen are finding fish and game harder to obtain.

Georgia's Wildlife Federation will have a greatly increased membership when these facts are discovered by former "commuters." There will be a demand for action. Watch and see.

Personally, I have heeded the Wildlife Department's admonition to "Stop Over in Georgia for Good Hunting." But there still is a question that hasn't been answered—"Where?"

Never Again I'd rather be sentenced to pick an acre of cotton than be commissioned by anyone to pick another goose. John Martin sold me on the idea that it was character building, and so it is. And if a goose doesn't have pimples, there's one thing one does have: feathers. And down. And it gets you down.

There's no short cut. After the huge honker has been frozen and is thawing out, care must be taken in plucking feathers not to break the skin. So it's a long, arduous, tedious task. It's almost a case of picking feather by feather. And that's impossible. After plucking feathers until you're blue in the face, you then start all over again on down. And then there are the little quills, or pin feathers, that must be pinched out of the skin.

We must have missed quite a few wof these, for when Julia went to cook the birds she had to spend a lot of extra time going over what we thought was a thorough job. You just can't do a thorough job of cleaning a goose. Patience wears thin. Nerves grow raw. Fingers and wrists grow numb. All feeling goes.

Personally, I'd rather pay $5 for the privilege of NOT tackling another Canadian honker.

And now that I know what it's all about, I can appreciate how difficult they are to bring down. It takes a pretty heavy load of shot to penetrate the layers of feathers. In full flight they shed the shot—and small wonder.

Next time John Martin talks me into something like this I'm going to offer, instead, to do the day's washing.

Rajah Denied Rightful Spot, Writer Argues

Considine Asks Veteran Baseball Fans To Make Selection.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(INS)—The veteran baseball fans of the country—at least the good cross-section which responded to a recent plea from this department—are agreed that of all the great baseball figures of the past who are not now in the hall of fame the man who most deserves that honor is Rogers Hornsby.

The great right-handed hitter, who has been tacitly barred from a major league managerial berth because owners fear they'll arouse the wrath of Judge Landis if they appoint a man who in turn aroused Landis' anti-racing ire, has a lifetime batting average of .358. Only Cobb's suitably immortalized .363 average tops Hornsby's. The Rajah thrice hit over 400 and was a winning World Series manager.

But he has never been able to muster enough votes among the baseball writers of the country to induce him in the Cooperstown, N. Y., memorial to the game. The rules state that only players garnering 75 per cent of the total sportswriters' votes are eligible.

We saw so few of the oldtimers in action that we asked the more seasoned fans to guide us in making the ten choices we are permitted as a baseball writer. It was Hornsby, by a comfortable margin, for first choice—even among fans whose shaky handwriting proved their statements that they are close students of the game as far back as the 1880s.

HUGGINS NEXT. Behind Hornsby finished the late great Miller Huggins, tiny boss of the Yankees during the fabulous twenties. Dozens of oldtimers remembered him as a player, but by and large he gained respect as a manager, who miraculously held together a gang of the toughest, wildest and greatest players the game ever knew.

Immediately back of Huggins finished Frankie Frisch, manager of the Pirates from 1926 to 1937. He played his final game for the Cardinals in 1919 to join the Giants until he played his final game in 1937. His lifetime batting average is .316, and he holds a host of records and near records. He made six hits in six consecutive times at bat in a game in 1924; set a record for most chances accepted by a second baseman, plus a record for most assists; led his league three times in stolen bases, played in eight World Series, and won 571 in his two all-star games and was always a great, driving force on the field.

Mickey Cochrane, of almost similar temperament, finished behind Frisch in fourth place in our poll. Many called him the greatest catcher they ever saw. Curiously enough, the baseball writers have never given a catcher enough votes to put him in the hall of fame.

Our poll became snarled in a tie for fifth place, a tie between Clark Griffith and the late Bud Waddell. Griffith pioneered with Ban Johnson and Charles Comiskey (both in the hall) to form the American League and became its first winning manager, as pilot of the White Sox in 1910.

WON 236. He won 24 games and lost only seven that year; won 235 and lost 139 during his long active life in the sport, inaugurated many useful reforms, installed many new techniques into pitching—and hasn't been forgotten by the oldtimers.

Waddell, the great eccentric who needed a keeper, won 203 games and lost 142 during his curious career and struck out the appalling number of 2,375 men. He struck out 343 men in 1904, and once pitched a full double-header. It was during his minor league days that he once called in all of his fielders—and struck out the side with the aid of only his catcher.

Brooklyn hasn't forgotten Dazzy Vance in the rush to hail "dem bums." The old dazzer copped seventh place in this poll. Back of Vance came Iron Man Joseph Jerome McGinnity, who started pitching for Montgomery (Ala.) in 1893 and finished with Dubuque in 1925. Five times McGinnity, who reached his greatest fame under McGraw, pitched double-headers. Back of the iron man, in ninth place, finished Hughie Jennings, manager of the Tigers from 1907 through 1920, a great batter in the era of the dead ball (and hit by the pitcher 49 times in one season). And in 10th place came Frank Chance, the "peerless leader," boss of the Cubs in the early 1900's when the Cubs made four World Series between 1906 and 1910.

These 10 names will go on our hall of fame ballot. Thanks.

Navy Relief Gets $89,092

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today that the Navy Relief Fund received $89,092.01 from last Friday night's benefit fight between Joe Louis and Buddy Baer.

This represented Louis' entire purse, minus only training expenses; Jacobs' entire promotional profits, a portion of Baer's cut, a contribution from every preliminary fighter on the card and half the salary of every ring official who worked as referee or judge.

Jacobs said the Navy would announce the complete breakdown of the figures tomorrow. The gross gate was $189,700.55. The net was estimated at $161,000, of which Louis' share would have been in the neighborhood of $64,000. His training expenses ordinarily run about $13,000 or $14,000 for a fight, which would make his contribution to the Navy fund approximately $50,000.

BIG JOB AHEAD—These Boys' High boys have their work cut out for them this year. They must fill the shoes of Purple Hurricane cagers who carried Dwight Keith's five to the Big Six League championship and to the finals of the state tournament last year. With Johnny Doyle, Bobby Gaston and Dixie Cohen gone and Clint Castle-berry sidelined with a football shoulder injury, Red Hughes and this quintet must shoulder the burden in league play starting tonight. Left to right are Charlie Smith, David Hambrick, Bob Rayle, Scott Reynolds and Charles Brooks. The Purples open against G. M. A. and Tech High faces Marist at Grady court.

Jim Thomson, Hogan Tie for Open Golf Title

Snead, Cooper Blow Chances for Los Angeles Crown.

By ROBERT MYERS.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Drama and heartbreaks were written into the finish of the 17th annual $10,000 Los Angeles Open Golf tournament today as wee Benny Hogan and husky Jimmy Thomson wound up in a deadlock for the rich prize, and history repeated itself with a slap in the face hard luck Sam Snead.

Hogan and Thomson, golf's mightiest men today, finished the four-day 72-hole battle over the green acres of Hillcrest Country Club tied at 282 blows apiece. Thomson shot the finish round over the par 36-36-72 course in an uneventful, consistent fashion, leaving Hogan to supply the gallery thrill, and Snead and pace setter Harry Cooper to furnish the disappointment.

Slamming Sam from Hot Springs, Va., blew himself out of the tournament on the 18th. He took eight blows to conquer the steep, elevated par-five hole, and ended with 285.

ANOTHER EIGHT. It was an eight on a par-five hole at Philadelphia in 1939 that cost Snead the United States Open.

Cooper, who started out on the final round with a two-stroke lead over Hogan, and three strokes over Thomson and Snead, faded under the bristling pace of these two power sluggers, Hogan and Jimmy, and took a 75 for 285. Thomson finished first with a brilliant 69, and Hogan, biggest money winner in the game today, came up to the 500-yard 18th needing a birdie four.

Sam Snead had reached the 18th but a short time before, but he was three blows under par. Then came Snead's explosion from the front rank with a 78 for 285. Hogan's drive traveled 325 yards and he reached the green with an iron, going past the flag by 25 feet. He got down in two for his birdie, a score of 70 and a tie with Thomson.

The crowd loved it.

PLAYOFF TODAY. The two play the deadlock off tomorrow for the prize money—$3,500 to the winner and $1,700 to the runner-up.

Snead, Cooper and young Chick Harbert, of Battle Creek, Mich., who had a 70, tied in the 285 bracket, while six strokes back of the twin leaders were ex-National Champion Byron Nelson, of Toledo, and Willie Goggin, of White Plains, N. Y.

Horton Smith, the first-round leader, took 75 blows to get around today and tied with Herman Barron, White Plains, and Paul Runyan, Rumson, N. J.

'Big Six' Cage League Opens at Grady Tonight

Smithies Meet Marist, Purples Play G. M. A. in Double-Header Here.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

Atlanta high school basketballers will do a jack-in-the-box act by poking their heads out for the first time tonight as the Big Six League opens its season with a double-header at Henry Grady court and a single game at Canton.

While Commercial High is up in Canton for an opening tilt, Tech High and Boys' High will be playing hosts at Grady to Marist and G. M. A. respectively, with the Smithies and Ivy Street Cadets opening ceremonies at 7:30 o'clock.

The Smithies, who played the doormat role last season, have been rejuvenated by the injection of new blood, and Coach Swede Phillips' five, with a great pre-season record, will start the year as co-favorites with Canton to cap the crown which last year was annexed by Dwight Keith's Purple Hurricane.

The defending champions lost three topnotchers—Johnny Doyle, Bobby Gaston and Dixie Cohen—by graduation, and Clint Castleberry, All-G. I. A. A. guard, won't see much service in early games due to a shoulder injury sustained in the Milk Bowl football tilt with Asheville New Year's Day.

Lester (Red) Hughes, the only first stringer from last year who will start tonight, is bigger and better than ever, but he too is below par due to an early season injury. Charles Brooks is great-

Cancellation Of Southern Meet Looms

Golf Group Directors Will Be Pelled This Week.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Jan. 12.—(AP)—President Charles V. Rainwater, of the Southern Golf Association, announced here tonight that the association's directors will be pelled this week to determine whether the 1942 Southern Amateur Golf Tournament will be cancelled because of the war.

No official action has yet been taken on postponing the tourney, scheduled for June at the Audubon Country Club in Louisville, Ky., Rainwater said.

The association's 15 directors will be polled in ballots to be mailed out from Pensacola tomorrow, Rainwater said, and their decision is expected to be known the latter part of the week.

Although he characterized reports that the tournament already had been cancelled as "prema-ture," Rainwater said it was "entirely likely" that the directors would vote to call it off in view of the action taken by the United States Golf Association.

The U. S. G. A. voted Saturday to cancel plans for the 1942 National Amateur, National Women's Amateur, National Open and Public Links tournaments.

Louis Passes Physical Test For Army Job

Heavyweight Champ Will Become Private at Camp Upton.

By SID FEDER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Uncle Sam's Army told Joe Louis today that he doesn't have flat feet and that he's husky enough to put on a soldier suit Wednesday.

The heavyweight champion of the world took a five-minute ferry ride across New York harbor, became draft registrant No. 374 at the First Army headquarters at Fort Jay on Governor's Island, and, after an hour and a half session with a set of doctors, was given his final physical "okay" for the Army.

Then, munching a handful of peanuts, he took the ferry back to Manhattan for his last 48 hours as Joe Louis, the champ who gets $100,000 or so for a few brief minutes' work. Wednesday at his induction at Camp Upton, Long Island, he becomes Private J. Louis Barrow at $21 per month.

MORALE DIVISION. Afterward, the Army will shift him to its morale division, and in late March he'll probably have a furlough to fight for the Army fund.

The Army took over Joe Louis today—but in the process Joe just about took over the Army. He created more furore at First Army headquarters than a full dress inspection for the chief of staff. Some 400 other selectees, on hand for their own physical tests, flocked around him on the ferry and in the long chute-like examination rooms of Fort Jay's Medical building and paid little, if any, attention to the sergeants and the "M. P.'s" trying to keep them lined up. Jim Braddock, the gallant old warrior from whom Joe won the heavyweight title back in 1937, took the ferry ride to give him a "good luck, pardner."

WEIGHS 220. A whistle went up as Joe stepped on the scales and Sergeant William Christina called out "220."

This included Joe's trousers and shoes and probably the loudest pair of suspenders ever conceived. The sergeant estimated that without the clothes he probably was 215.

Joe revealed that in transferring his induction from Chicago to New York, and waiving all notices and delays, he had done it so suddenly he had not even advised his wife, Marva. As a result she was coming in today from Chicago.

"Guess she'll have something to say," Joe reckoned. "But I'll Uncle Sam's boy now, as long as this war's on."

Ruth Scheduled To Quit Hospital

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Babe Ruth spent the weekend in the hospital, although earlier plans were to release the former Yankee home run hitter last Friday.

His wife, however, says the Babe is "getting along nicely." He was taken to the hospital January 2 for treatment of a nervous condition resulting largely from an auto accident in which he escaped injury.

There's nothing like a good big load of starting statistics to drive a man to the limit. So didn't you don't like the drive, clanny figures concerning the amount of money Uncle Samuel derived from Atlanta golf during 1941.

The figures were collected and certified by Joe the Ghost, a character we have not consulted since he broke the lamp last summer while executing a brassie shot in our room.

After checking a few of them, we think they are somewhat accurate, although we would have no accountants' pencil. Joe put in many hours of hard work in compiling said figures. There are furrows in his figure and he'll wrinkle in his shroud—from many sleepless hours.

When last seen—rather, after the figuring was left on the desk and a soft rustle indicated Joe's departure—he had reached the mumble-stumble stage. A desk wobbled as he left, but there was no reply to our questionings. Joe was mad as hell.

Oh, yes, the figures.

Uncle Samuel got as his 10 per cent from Atlanta golf something like $47,150. At least, that's Joe's figure and he'll have to dig his own way out of which he fell along the way.

Of course, to realize such a war defense tax Atlanta golfers would have spent almost half a million dollars on club dues, balls, clubs, shoes, shirts and various other accessories.

Personally, I think Joe was just about $50,000 short on his estimates. In other words, when you include slacks, windbreakers, sweat shirts, golf gloves, not purchased and therefore not included in golf shop or sports goods stores, the amount should reach $520,000, with $52,000 going to the government via taxes.

Two Atlanta clubs pay out more than $1,000 a month in taxes (not new) on dues alone, so it isn't hard to understand how Joe got his figures into telephone numbers.

If you don't think Joe's figures are accurate, why just let him know and we'll call in Joe for a recount. I'll warn you now, though, Joe's going to be vicious about the whole affair.

Best thing to do is just drop the entire roundup. Let Joe be Joe and let him better in time to help do a little income-tax figuring.

That will clear his mind of all those large numbers.

Richardson's boys' team handed Campbell High, of Fairburn, its first loss of the season, 24 to 22, last night at Russell. Campbell had previously won four contests. The Richardson girls also won, defeating the Campbell girls, 18 to 16.

The boys' game started slowly, with Richardson leading, 3 to 1, at the end of the first quarter. Campbell took the half-time lead at 11-3. Richardson vaulted ahead in the third quarter and led, 21-14, at the end of the period.

Banks Slays Crowds With Clowning Antics

Davey Banks is still going strong. The doughy little veteran of the Original Celtics continues to lay the customers in the aisles with his superior clowning and showmanship.

Here are excerpts from the Columbia (S. C.) State, indicating that when the Celtics play the Crackers at the city auditorium here Wednesday night, Atlanta fans will see another extraordinary performance.

"The Celtics, those New York Yankees in basketball pants, gave their stock performance last night in Carolina's packed field house, baffling the All-Stars 40 to 26."

"Davey Banks, the three-ring basketball circus, kept the crowd in stitches the entire time they were in the game. He started off a series of passing antics that took the heart out of the Stars and the audience fairly ate up his every move."

DOES EVERYTHING. "Davey did everything in the book and a lot of things that would have shocked the man who wrote it. He would dribble between another player's legs, suddenly whip the ball to a spectator on the sidelines, or drop the ball in the opposition's goal."

"It was a screwy affair. In the second half Referee Abe Fennen got in the game on the Celtics' side and cooperated in a passing attack. Davey occasionally interrupted a lightning-like passing bee to shoot the ball to one of the All-Stars, who would be almost too astonished to make the best of it."

Matthiessen, Spartan Lives Musician, Dies In Brunswick

Conductor in Heyday of Vaudeville, He Played at Old Bijou Theater.

J. A. D. (Jake) Matthiessen, 64, died Sunday afternoon at the home of a son in Brunswick. He will be buried in Atlanta tomorrow, with a group of musicians as his pallbearers.

Only the old-timers, patrons of the theater in the heyday of vaudeville, will recall Jake Matthiessen, but they will remember him well. Jake was one of the few remaining conductors who worked in the orchestra pit, leading a dozen musicians through a snappy overture, providing accompaniment for seven or eight vaudeville acts, breaking into a gay march after the final curtain.

He led his men in the famous old Bijou theater, on the site of today's Palmer building. He was leading his orchestra there one night when the Great Lafayette, magician and illusionist, was presenting a "hot" vaudeville show. This time the lion stole out of his cage and toward a door leading into the auditorium. Billy Holmes, who still sticks around and works for the Erlanger, shut the door in the face. And Jake Matthiessen, who had caught a glimpse of the escaping cat and feared a panic, started everybody cheering.

Jake Matthiessen played for years at Jake Wells' Forsyth theater when big-time vaudeville packed 'em in. He could handle anything from a Cohen tune to Beethoven, given half-a-dozen good union musicians.

Jake never professed to be a Toscanini. He was just an able professional musician who carried a union card and paid his union dues.

J. D. Matthiessen retired 10 years ago. More. His health was bad. He lived in Millen for a while, teaching violin and piano. Then he and his wife went to live with their son, Paul, in Brunswick. He died there Sunday.

The funeral will be at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the home of his wife and three sons, Paul, William and Jacob Jr. William lives in Atlanta and plays for a local radio station.

Mrs. Janie C. Hearn, of 1084 Lanier boulevard, yesterday filed in superior court a suit for $25,000 damages against the Atlanta Gas Light Company. Mrs. Hearn alleged that she was injured in an explosion in the green house at her home because of the negligence of the company in not maintaining a constant pressure in the gas pipes there. Variable pressures, she charged, permitted leakage, which caused an explosion, which she struck a match in the green house on February 12, 1941.
